Two men were killed in an accident at the G.T.R. station, Belleville, Ont., on Saturday morning. An immigrant special ran through an open switch into a yard engine, killing Peter Young, an engineer, and a man named Brewer, a car tapper. Both men were married. Brewer leaves a grown-up family.

ment at Welland, Ont., and William Gibbons were upset from a canoe on Sunday evening, while on the Welland river, by the swell from a launch, Bag of Chippewa. Gibbons was rescued, but Goodheart sank before assistance arrived.

At an early hour on Friday morning a special train, loaded with fruit for the coast, collided head-on with an empty express freight train west-bound, about two hundred yards west of the station at Collins Bay. Just how the two trains happened to be on the same track is not known but it is supposed that the west-bound train was shunting. When the engineers and firemen of both trains saw that a collision was inevitable they jumped. A half minute later both trains crashed into one another. The shock produced was severe, and the fact that one train was light accounts for no injuries. The only one injured in the least was H. A. Ansell, Montreal, the expressman on the east-bound train. He had a most miraculous escape, as large iron girders and braces all around him were bent and twisted out of shape.

Suffering from a bullet wound in his right leg, Wilfrid Card, aged thirteen, son of Lester Card, of Moscow, was taken to the Kingston general hospital, on Friday morning. The lad was shot in an accident which occurred at his home. He was attended by Dr. Bogart and with the use of the X-rays, the bullet was located and removed, during the course of the morning, and the lad is now getting along nicely, and will be able to leave for his home in the course of a few days, none the worse for his mishap. It appears that the lad, with a number of companions, were handling a loaded revolver, and it is stated that the boys were trying to take out the cartridges. One of the lads was holding the revolver when it went off, the bullet going into the leg of young Card. The mishap occurred on Wednesday of last week. The lad did not say a word to his parents about the accident until Thursday, and it was for this reason that he did not reach the hospital until Friday. His father was away doing some threshing when the accident occurred. The youngster bore the pain as long as he could, and then was compelled to tell about the accident.

The Belleville Intelligencer contains the following article: For some time negotiations have been going on between the company owning the Strs. Brockville, Aletha and Varuna, with a view of amalgamating the company with the Hepburn fleet of Picton. That the new company has been formed there is now no longer any doubt, and the charter will likely be out in a few days. The new company will comprise all the Hepburn fleet, store houses, wharfs, dry docks, etc., in addition to the three steamers above mentioned and properties held by that company. It is the intention of the new company to build as soon as possible, a new steamer at a cost of $130,000 or more and run in conjunction with the Alexandria on the Montreal route, the new boat leaving the Eastern end of the route the same hour the Alexandria leaves the Western end. The new company will endeavor to own all their own wharves and landings along the route. It is rumored the company are already considering the building of a new landing in this city on the site of the old Grand Junction property. This could be made a most desirable landing and would add much to the appearance of the harbor.

CLICK OF THE KEY

The Reading of Telegraph Messages by Sound.

STORY OF THE FIRST TRIAL

A Lack of Tape Caused Alonzo B. Cornell to Attempt Interpreting the Morse Code by Ear—The Discovery That Abolished the Use of the Tape.

Extra Cornell is known in history as the father of Cornell university, as one of the men who helped to build the first telegraph line and as an ardent organizer of telegraph systems in the early days, being instrumental in the formation of the now famous Western Union Telegraph company. His son, Alonzo B. Cornell, became ultimately vice president of the Western Union and governor of New York state—high commercial and political honors.

Yet he once confessed to me that he felt he should be credited with the additional honor of having made the discovery that telegraph messages could be read by ear, and he seemed to take more pride in his part in bringing this about than he did in any of his other achievements.

"I was trained as a telegraph operator," said Mr. Cornell in telling me the story. "I suppose I took to telegraphy naturally because of my father's deep and large interests in the then new mode of communication. Anyway, I learned the Morse key easily, and I was, in fact, very fond of telegraphing from both the practical and the scientific standpoints.

"One afternoon, sometime in the early fifties, when I was stationed at Albany, N. Y., there was an unusual influx of newspaper dispatches—I was in charge of the press key—and in the midst of the task of receiving them I found to my consternation that I was out of tape. Before taking my seat before the key I had neglected to replenish the tape reel.

"There was a bountiful supply of tape in the cellar of the building, but it was a long trip there—there were no elevators in those days—and I knew that to go there I would waste precious time. And there were those anxious newspaper men hanging over my shoulder.

"Suddenly, as I fished about mentally for the quickest way out of my dilemma, this thought popped into my head: 'You don't need any tape. Half the time you don't look at it when the dispatches are coming in before you write them out. You trust to your ears to tell what the instrument says. Why not do so now?' Instantly I determined to see whether or not I could take the dispatches by sound alone.

"I put my fingers on the key and broke in on New York, whence the dispatches were coming. 'Send rather slowly and very distinctly,' I asked the man at the other end of the wire. He at once began to do so—not without some curiosity as to my reason, I found out later.

DESERONTO ROAD

There passed away on Saturday last,
20th inst., an old and much respected resident of this road, in the person of Mr. Robert Sager, in the 80th year of his age. Mr. Sager was as well as usual up to the time of his death, although he had been failing in health for the past year he was able to be around and walked to the barn and was smart for him. Heart failure was the immediate cause of death. He is survived by two sons, Stautts, of Newburgh, and H. W. Sager at home. He leaves one brother, Mr. Levi A. Sager, of Deseronto Road, and five sisters.
The farmers of this road have about finished harvest for this year and the hum of the thrashing machine is heard every day. The yield of barley being good but oats are rather lighter than other years.
Mrs. William Joyce is away to the States for a week's trip visiting her daughter, Miss Pearl.
Mr. M. S. Madole is erecting a new verandah on his farm residence now occupied by William Joyce.
The road just west of Napanee is being improved, a lot of broken stone being placed in different places where before mud puddles existed.
Mr. and Mrs. Walker from Thurlow attended the funeral of the late Robert Sager.

terminated to see whether or not I could take the dispatches by sound alone.

"I put my fingers on the key and broke in on New York, whence the dispatches were coming. 'Send rather slowly and very distinctly,' I asked the man at the other end of the wire. He at once began to do so—not without some curiosity as to my reason, I found out later.

"But I didn't think of that at the time, for I was glowing all over with the knowledge that I could write out the dispatches—and write them correctly, for they made sense—by simply listening to the sounds that the key made.

"Thus I continued taking the dispatches to the very end. Then the New York operator called me. 'What are you doing up there?' he asked.
'Why did you want me to send slowly and distinctly?'

"I answered that I had said goodbye to the telegraph tape forever and told him of the discovery I had made. He was immediately interested. 'Send me slowly and very distinctly fifteen or twenty words, and I'll see whether or not I can do the same thing,' he requested.

"I did so, full of confidence, and a little later there came to me this message: 'I've done it too. Some of the other boys say they can. I predict that within a month there won't be an inch of tape used in the New York office.'

"Years later," added Mr. Cornell, "I was told that about the time that I discovered for myself a new and revolutionary method of receiving telegraph messages the same method was also discovered by an operator in the main office in Pittsburg. I have no doubt that this is true. Sooner or later the discovery was bound to be made not only in one, but several offices. But I have always felt that I was the first to make the discovery and should be credited with it in telegraphic history."—Boston Globe.

A Vicious Fish.

In South America there is a small fish that not only attacks its fellows of the sea and river, but is greatly dreaded by the natives, who during certain seasons have to ford the streams in which the caribitos are found. Bathers are often attacked by them, the sharp, chisel shaped teeth taking a bit from the flesh wherever they attack. They are perfect scavengers, eating the animals that float down the river—dead or alive.

"Well, don't you see how it fits?"—

THE SECRET OF HER POWER;

Or, A TRUTH NEVER OLD.

CHAPTER I.—(Cont'd)

"Politeness would require me to deny, but truthfulness would compel me to assent."

"Of course it would. You don't want anybody with you who has heard all your best stories a thousand times, and knows what your doctor has told you not to eat; I don't want anybody who has seen how I look when I'm ill, and knows where my false hair is put on. It's quite natural. By the way, Boom says Ovid's ladies had perukes too, as one of them put her wig on upside down before him, and it chilled his feelings toward her; it would chill most people's. I wonder if they made them well in those days, and what they cost."

"I think you might have invited some of the husbands."

"Oh, dear, no. Why? They're staying somewhere else."

"And your friends are never jealous. I suppose; at least, never about their husbands?"

"An agreeable woman is never jealous of anybody. She hasn't time to be. It is only the women who can't amuse themselves who make that sort of fuss."

"Are you an agreeable woman, my dear?"

"I have always been told so by everybody except yourself."

Lord Usk rose and laughed as he lit a cigar.

"Well, I won't have any scandal in the house. Mind that."

"You'd better put that up on a placard as you have put 'No fees allowed to the servants,' up in the hall."

"I'm sure I would with pleasure if I thought anybody would attend to it. I don't like your set, Dolly. That's the truth. I wish you'd drop nine-tenths of 'em."

"My dear George, I wish you would mind your own business, to use a very vulgar expression. Do I ever say anything when you talk nonsense in the lords, and when you give your political picnics, and shout yourself hoarse to the farmers, who go away and vote against your man? Do I ever say anything when you shoot pheasants which cost you a sovereign a head for their corn, and stalk stags which cost you £80 each for their keep, and lose races with horses which cost you ten thousand a year for their breeding and training? Do I ever say anything when you think that people who are hungering for the whole of your land will be either grateful or delighted because you take 10 per cent. off their rents? You know I don't. I think you ought to be allowed to ruin yourself and accelerate the revolution in any absurd way which may seem best to you. In return, pray let me manage my own house parties and choose my own acquaintances. It is not much to ask. What are you going away? How exactly like a man, to go away when he gets the worst of the argument."

is pleasant on the morning silence. He doesn't notice any of it; he thinks it odiously hot, and what fools they were who clipped a yew-tree into the shape of a periwig, and what a beast of a row that trout stream makes. Why don't they turn it, and send it farther from the house? He's got no money to do anything, or he would have it done to-morrow.

A peacock begins to scream. The noise of a peacock cannot be said to be melodious or soothing at any time.

"Why don't you wring that bird's neck?" he says, savagely, to a gardener's boy who is gathering up fallen rose leaves.

The boy gapes and touches his hair; his hat being already on the ground in sign of respect. The peacocks have been at Surrenden ever since Warren Hastings sent the first pair as a present to the Lady Usk of that generation, and they are regarded with a superstitious admiration by all the good Hampshire people who walk in the gardens of Surrenden or visit them on the public day. The Surrenden peacocks are as sacred to the neighborhood and the workpeople as ever was the green ibis in old Egypt.

"How long will they touch their caps or pull their forelocks to us," thinks Lord Usk, "though I don't see why they can reasonably object to do it as long as we take off our hats to Wales and say 'sir' to him."

This political problem suggests the coming elections to his mind—the coming elections are a disagreeable subject for meditation; why wasn't he born in his grandfather's time, when there were pocket boroughs as handy and portable as snuff-boxes, and the country returned Lord Usk's nominee as a matter of course without question?

"Well, and what good men they got in those days," he thinks. "Fox, and Hervey, and Walpole, and Burke, and all the rest of 'em; fine orators, clever ministers, members that did the nation honor; every great noble sent up some fine fellow with breeding and brains, bluncombe and bad logic, and dropped aspirates had no kind of chance to get into the house in those days. Now, even when Boom's old enough to put up himself, I dare say there'll be some biscuit baker or some pinmaker sent down by the radical caucus or the English Land League who'll make the poor devil believe that the millenium's coming in with them and leave Boom nowhere!"

The prospect was so shocking that he throws his cigar end at the peacocks and gets up out of the evergreen periwig.

As he does so he comes, to his absolute amazement, face to face with his friend Lord Blanford.

Lord Blanford is supposed by all the world, or at least that large portion of it which is interested in his movements, to be at that mo-

Blanford laughs languidly.

"But! you ungrateful, untravelled country squire! I should like to fasten you to a life-buoy in the middle of the Red Sea. Why do Englishmen perspire in every pore the moment the thermometer's above zero in their own land, and yet stand the tropics better than any other European?"

"You know I've sold Achnalorre," says his host, apropos de rien, but to him Achnalorre seems apropos of everything in creation.

Blanford is surprised, but he does not show any surprise. "Ah! Quite right, too. If we wished to please the radicals we couldn't find any way to please them and injure ourselves equal to our insane fashion of keeping hundreds of square acres at an enormous cost, only that for a few weeks in the summer we may do to death some of the most innocent and graceful of God's creatures."

"That's just the bosh Dolly talks."

"Lady Usk is a wise politician, then. Let her train Boom for his political life. I don't know which is the more utterly indefensible—our enormous highland deer slaughter or our imbecile butchery of birds. They ought to have recorded the introduction of battue shooting into the British isles by the great and good on the Albert memorial."

"One must shoot something."

"I never saw why. But something honestly found by a setter in stubble, and 3,000 head of game between five guns in a morning are very different things. What did they give you for Achnalorre?"

Usk discourses of Achnalorre with breathless eloquence as of a lover eulogizing the charms of a mistress forever lost to him.

DESSERT.

Mousse.—To one quart of very thick cream, whipped, add one pound of pulverized sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla flavoring, and one and one-half dozen macaroons which have been broken into small bits. Beat this mixture thoroughly and place in molds which have been lined with waxed paper. Cover molds with cracked ice and salt; cover and let stand for a few hours. Serve on a platter and slice like brick ice cream.

Lemon Custard Cream.—Juice and rind of two lemons, two cupfuls of granulated sugar, yolks of three eggs, three tablespoonfuls of flour stirred into the sugar, one teaspoonful of butter; cook in double boiler until thick; when cool add three pints of milk and freeze.

Orange Jelly.—Select tart oranges, press out the juice, and mix with an equal quantity of juice pressed from sub-acid apples. Then for each pint of juice use from three-quarters to one pound of sugar, and process the same as in directions for making other jellies.

Cherry Cake.—One-quarter pound of butter, three ounces sifted sugar, one-half pound of self-raising flour, one teaspoonful of essence of lemon, one teacupful of sweet milk, one-quarter pound of glace cherries, two eggs. Beat butter and sugar to a cream. Beat eggs, add them to butter and sugar and beat till light, then add half the flour essence and milk. Add remainder of flour, and beat well. Cut cherries in quarters, and mix. Line tin with buttered paper and put in

BROKEN HEALTH BRINGS WRINKLES

How All Women Can Preserve Good Health and Good Looks.

Too many women and girls look old long before they should. In nine cases out of ten it is a matter of health. Work, worry, confinement indoors and lack of exercise cause the health to run down. Then faces become thin and pale; lines and wrinkles appear, there are headaches, backaches, and a constant feeling of tiredness.

Women and girls who feel well look well. Therefore improve your health and you will look better. It is a fact that thousands of Canadian women and girls owe the robust health they enjoy to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They feel well and enjoy life as only a healthy person can.

The simple reason for this is that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich, red blood, which strengthens all the vital organs, brings brightness to the eye, a glow of health to the cheek, and bracing strength to every part of the body. Mrs. Warren Wright, Una, Sask., says: "I feel that I owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that nothing I can say in their favor will fully repay. I was so reduced in health and strength that I was hardly able to walk at all, and could do no work whatever. My blood was so thin and watery that my lips and finger tips resembled those of a corpse. I had almost constant headaches, and the smallest exertion would set my heart palpitating violently, and often I would drop in a faint. Nothing I did seemed to help me in the least and I felt so far gone that I never expected to recover my health. I was in this critical condition when I read in a newspaper of a cure in a case like mine through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them. I got a half dozen boxes and before I used them all there was a great change in my condition. My appetite returned, the color began to come back to my lips and face, and my strength was increasing. I continued the use of the Pills for some time longer and they restored me to the pink of perfect health. While using the Pills I gained twenty pounds in weight. My cure was made in the summer of 1909, and I am now enjoying better health than ever before."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do for other weak and worn women just what they did for Mrs. Wright, if they are given a fair trial. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Lord Usk has gone into the gardens in a towering rage. He is a gentleman; he will quarrel with his wife all day long, but he will always stop short of swearing at her, and he feels that if he stays in the room a moment longer he will swear—that allusion to the Scotch stags is too much for humanity (with a liver) to endure. When Achnalorrie is sold to that beastly American, to be twitted with what stags used to cost! Certainly they had cost a good deal, and the keepers had been bores, and the crofters had been nuisances, and there had always been some disease or other among the birds, and he had never cared as much as some men for deer-stalking, but still, as Achnalorrie is irrevocably gone, the thirty-mile drive over the bleak hills, and the ugly house on the stony strathside, and the blinding rains and the driving snows and the swelling streams, which the horses had to cross as best they could, all seem unspeakably lovely to him and the sole things worth living for; and then his wife has the heartlessness to twit him with the cost of each stag!

"Women have no feeling," he growls, as he walks about the gardens. "If they think they can make a point they'll make it, let it hurt you how it may."

He possesses two other very big places in adjoining counties, Orme castle and Denton abbey, but they are ponderous, vast, gorgeous, ceremonious, ugly; he detests both of them. Of Surrenden he is, on the contrary, as fond as he can be of anything except the best Achnalorrie, and a little cozy house that he has at Newmarket where the shadow of Lady Usk has never fallen.

He hears the noise of wheels on gravel. It comes from the other side of the house; it is his brake and his omnibus going down the avenue on their way to the nearest railway station, four miles off, to meet some of his coming guests there. Well, there'll be nothing seen of them till 2 o'clock at luncheon. They are all people he hates, or thinks he hates for that best of all possible reasons, that his wife likes them. Why can't Dulcia Waverley come before the 20th? Lady Waverley always amuses him, and agrees with him. It is so pleasant to be agreed with, only when one's own people do so it makes one almost more angry than when one is contradicted. When his wife agrees with him it leaves him nothing to say. When Dulcia Waverley agrees with him it leaves him with a soothing sense of being sympathized with and appreciated. Dulcia Waverley always tells him that he might have been a great statesman if he had chosen; as he always thinks so himself, the echo of this thoughts is agreeable.

He sits down in one of the clipped yew-tree arbors to light a new cigar and smoke it peaceably. A peacock goes past him, drawing its beautiful train over the smooth-shaven grass. A mavis is singing or a rose bough. The babble of a stream hidden under adjacent trees nowhere.

The prospect was so shocking that he throws his cigar end at the peacocks and gets up out of the evergreen periwig.

As he does so he comes, to his absolute amazement, face to face with his friend Lord Blanford.

Lord Blanford is supposed by all the world, or at least that large portion of it which is interested in his movements, to be at that moment in the forest recesses of Lahore.

"My dear George," says Lord Blanford, in a very sweet voice, wholly unlike the peacock's, "I venture to take you by surprise. I have left my tub at Weymouth and come on foot across the country to you. It is most unpardonable conduct, but I have always abused your friendship."

The master of Surrenden cannot find words of welcome warm enough to satisfy himself. He is honestly delighted. Failing Dulcia Waverley nobody could have been so agreeable to him as Blanford. For once a proverb is justified, "a self-invited guest is thrice welcome." He is for dragging his visitor in at once to breakfast, but Blanford resists. He has breakfasted on board his yacht; he could not eat again before luncheon; he likes the open air, he wishes to sit in the periwig and smoke.

"Do not let us disturb Lady Usk," he said. "I know chateaux in the country have a thousand and one things to do before luncheon, and I know your house is full from gable to cellar."

"It will be by night," says the master of Surrenden, with disgust, "and not a decent soul among 'em all."

"That is very sad for you," says Blanford, with a twinkle in his handsome eyes. He is not a handsome man, but he has beautiful eyes, a patrician profile, and a look of extreme distinction; his expression is a little cynical but more amused; he is about 40 years old but looks younger. He is not married, having by some miracle of good fortune or of personal dexterity contrived to elude all the efforts made for his capture. His barony is one of the oldest in England, and he would not exchange it, were it possible, for a dukedom.

"Since when have you been so in love with decency, George?" he asks, gravely.

Lord Usk laughs. "Well, you know, I think one's own house should be proper."

"No doubt," says Lord Blanford, still more gravely. Is Lady Waverley not here? She would save a hundred Sodoms with a dozen Gomorrah thrown in gratis."

"I thought you were in India," says his host, who does not care to pursue the subject of Lady Waverley's saintly qualifications for the salvation of cities or men.

"I went to India; but it bored me. I liked it when I was twenty-four; one likes so many things when one is twenty-four, even champagne and a cotillon. How's Boom?"

"Very well; gone to his cousin's in Suffolk. Sure you won't have something to eat? They can bring it here in a minute if you like out-of-doors best."

"Quite sure, thanks. What a lovely place this is! I haven't seen it for years. I don't think there's another garden so beautiful in all England. After the great dust plains and the sweltering, humid heats of India, all this coolness and greenness are like paradise."

"It's awfully hot!"

Press the apricots through a sieve, add them to the syrup, add the lemon juice, and when cold freeze the same as ice cream; then add the meringue. Peach sherbet is made in precisely the same manner.

THE LAUNDRY.

After trying several ways to wash silk stockings and failing, I have now met with great success in using this method. Make soapsuds of lukewarm water, using a good grade of castile soap. Do not use hot water, as it destroys the life of the silk. Rinse in cold, clear water until free from all soap, then pull the stocking lengthwise and press with a warm iron, which will restore the original gloss. Never use hot iron.

R. K.

When washing tan colored clothes or stockings, or the khaki colored suits, put a little brown dye in the rinsing water and in the starch. One 10 cent package of dye, dissolved in boiling water, and then bottled, will last an entire season. Add only a little to the water. Using the dye prevents that washed out look so common to the khaki colored suits after laundering.

In taking lace curtains off the stretchers don't pull off but lift off from each nail carefully and when pressing the edges dampen the edges first, then press, and you will find they will not ruffle but hang as straight and smooth as when new.

Flour Starch Hint.—Make flour starch and set aside to cool. Dip the dress in warm, not hot, water. Then rub the starch over every part of the dress. Wash in warm water without soap and rinse. Do not starch again, as the dress will retain enough to make it sufficiently stiff. When dry sprinkle and iron, taking care not to let it lie damp more than two hours. Organdies and lawns may be washed the way without fading, and will also retain the crispness of new goods.

transparent. Place a small piece of butter in each cup, sprinkle with chopped parsley, salt, and pepper. Fill the cups with cooked green peas.

Stuffed Cabbage.—Take a small head of cabbage, peel off the outside leaves, cut out the center. Put into the cabbage one pound hamburger steak, one egg, one tablespoonful of melted butter, half a cup of bread crumbs soaked in milk, a little nutmeg, salt and pepper to taste. Stir all these ingredients well together. Cook for three hours and thicken the gravy. This stuffing is good when rolled into two pounds of round steak and cook d like a pot roast.

Baked Tomatoes.—Chop one small onion, one-half green pepper, two slices of crisp bacon. Fry onions and peppers and cracked crumbs a golden brown in the bacon grease. Scoop out inside of six small tomatoes, add to the mixture, making a moist paste; fill shells; bake fifteen to twenty minutes with a little water in pan.

Steak with Bananas.—Peel one banana and slice in round pieces and while the steak is cooking fry them in a little hot butter till they are brown. After the meat is on the platter lay these pieces over it, arranging them prettily, and put some parsley around. Bananas are nice with steak.

Oyster Cabbage.—Shave one small head of green cabbage fine, add small tablespoonful of butter, salt and pepper to taste, add a pint of sweet milk, cook for half an hour. When done add two butter crackers or one soda cracker, roll fine and serve hot. The cracker will give the flavor of the oyster.

IN THE KITCHEN.

To get the best results from shredded cocoanut when it is to be used in cake icing or candy, soak it for a half hour in warm water before adding.

Always place citron in a moderately hot oven for a few moments before cutting it up for cakes or pudding.

Saxon Dumplings.—For six people take one heaping sieve of flour, warm it, add salt, one tablespoonful of sugar, and a little grated nutmeg and three eggs; warm a pint of sweet milk; in a cup of this dissolve one yeast cake (compressed yeast), mix milk with the flour, add yeast, mix again, and set to rise in a warm place; then knead and make heaps with a tablespoonful on a floured board, let these rise about half an hour, then boil in salted water for eight minutes; be sure to turn them as soon as dropped into the boiling water; also several times while boiling; when done tear them apart with forks, for then they will look and be as light as bread. Before serving, brown good butter with rolled crackers and pour over the dumplings.

ONTARIO GAINS.

Impetus to the Industrial Development of the Province.

The organization of the Canada Machinery Corporation has more than usual interest from an Ontario standpoint, inasmuch as all the companies included have grown with the country from very small beginnings to the point where they are the largest concerns of their kind, not only in Ontario, but in the whole of Canada.

The town of Galt has been the great centre in Canada for the manufacture of woodworking machinery and tools, and the growth of the industry there and in neighboring towns has been of the steady and soundest character. Ever since the woodworking machinery business in Canada was big enough to be known, the name of Mr. R. MacGregor has been closely associated with it, and it was under his direction that the leading companies included in the consolidation became known by the lines of machinery they manufactured from one end of Canada to the other.

Mr. MacGregor, as well as all the other men who have had practical experience in the different companies included in the consolidation are being identified with the Canada Machinery Corp., and as the re-organization plan provides for ample working capital of the new company, the development of the woodworking machinery and tool manufacturing of Canada should be much greater than it has ever been at any previous period.

INDIVIDUALITY IN CIGAR MANUFACTURING.

To many people the word Havana, as applied to cigars, means something fine to smoke. They would hardly believe that there are 50,000 bales of tobacco on the Island of Cuba to-day that is practically unsaleable.

The selection of the proper leaf is a science that is acquired only by the student in tobacco, and it takes years of study.

Even after the leaf has been well selected it can be spoiled in the manipulation. Two manufacturers, similarly equipped, may select a "Vega" of Havana tobacco that is very fine, one of them will take all the odd numbers and the other all the even numbers, they will make the same shape, weight and style, but the cigars will be entirely different in taste, because one has not exercised the same care in the dipping of the tobacco in the water, has stripped it too quickly, nor allowing it to properly absorb and draw through, has dried it too quickly, has dampened it too much because some of it became too dry, has given it to his workmen when it was either too dry, or too soft and has eventually turned out a poor cigar from a good piece of tobacco.

The house of "Payne of Granby" enjoys a very enviable reputation for their individuality in their cigars for the uniform blend and taste and the exquisite workmanship, as no smoker of their "Pharaoh" cigar has ever found one that drew hard.

All of the employees in "J. Bruce Payne, Limited," factory have learned their trade in the factory, their foremen have been promoted from the ranks of the cigar makers

PRESERVING.

Watermelon Rind Preserves.—The trouble of soaking the peeled rinds in brine, alum water, etc., before the final preserving is such that many who are fond of this delicious preserve do not care to attempt making it often. Try this simple way: After peeling rind carefully and cutting desired shape, weigh and allow scant equal weight of sugar. Mix well and let stand overnight, which will draw the juices, making it unnecessary to add water. Add a sliced lemon to flavor and boil until fruit is clear and syrup thick. Put in jars and keep in cool, dark place.

New Way of Keeping Fruit.—The following directions are given for the process of keeping fruit in jars covered only with cotton batting: Use crocks, stone butter jars, or any other convenient dishes. Prepare and cook the fruit precisely as for canning in glass jars; fill your dishes with fruit while hot and immediately cover with cotton batting, securely tied on. Remember that all putrefaction is caused by the invisible creatures in the air. Cooking expels all these, and they cannot pass through the cotton batting. The fruit thus protected will keep an indefinite period.

To Preserve Berries Whole.—Buy the fruit when not too ripe, pick over immediately, wash if necessary and put in glass jars, filling each one about two-thirds full. Put in the preserving kettle a pound of sugar and one cup of water for every two pounds of fruit, and let it come slowly to a boil. Pour this syrup into the jars over the berries, filling them to the brim, then set the jars in a kettle of cold water on the stove and let the water boil and the fruit become scalding hot. Take them out and seal perfectly tight. If this process is followed thoroughly the fruit will keep for several years. This recipe can be applied to other fruits also with success.

HENS ON TO THEIR JOB.

"Pardon me," said the lady on a marketing expedition, "but are these eggs fresh laid?"

"Absolutely, madam," replied the grocer, promptly. "The farmer I purchased those eggs from won't allow his hens to lay them any other way."

"Yes. They asked us to hand the rice over in a package so that it could be used when they got to housekeeping."

SIX KILLED, TEN INJURED

Wreck Horror on the Grand Trunk Railway in Michigan.

A despatch from Durand, Mich., says: Six dead, seven seriously injured, and three slightly is given out here on Thursday night by the Grand Trunk Railway Company as the official casualty list resulting from Wednesday night's rear-end collision between two east-bound trains. The dead:—Mrs. Squires' residence is thought to be Chicago, but this is uncertain. Master Squires, the ten-year-old son of Mrs. Squires, was crushed and burned. Mrs. Alma Woodward, en route from Chicago to Port Huron, Mich., was badly burned about the body, but her hair was scarcely touched. A nurse, name unknown, from St. John's Hospital, Chicago, accompanying Mrs. Woodward, was burned to a charred mass. Mr. James McBean of Chicago was also burned to a crisp, and Mrs. E. Gilpin of 25 East 46th place, Chicago, was scalded and burned.

The injured are:—Mrs. F. S. McBean, Chicago, right leg fractured, taken to Flint Hospital; Albert B. Watts, Edmonton, Alta., face and hands blistered badly, but condition not serious; removed to Flint Hospital. Clinton A. Davis of 598 West St. Catherine street, Montreal. A son of Mrs. Woodward, burned on all parts of the body, condition grave, lies in the Thomas House, Durand. Mrs. Leslie Dochler, Tavistock, Ont., 41 years old, was taken to Flint Hospital with a fractured right leg and hip. Mrs. F. S. Shelterz, Chicago, right arm fractured and suffering from internal injuries, lies in Flint Hospital. D. B. Mitchell of Battle Creek, engineer on No. 14, cuts and bruises. Geo. Donaldson of Battle Creek, fireman on No. 4, probably fatally scalded, now under care of physicians at Durand.

That there were nineteen passengers in the telescoped Pullman was established on Thursday afternoon. All of these, say the railway people, have been accounted for. To Assistant Superintendent Fitzhugh at Montreal the Durand officials wired that there were nineteen passengers in the Nebraska, of whom six were killed and the remains identified. Five injured are in the hospital at Durand, one of whom is likely to die. Eight passengers continued their journey to their destinations, having escaped from the forward end of the car uninjured. Engineer Mitchell of train No. 14 is in Flint hospital seriously injured, but will recover. The fireman on No. 4 is badly but not seriously burnt. Aside from the loss of the car by fire, the damage to the equipment will be slight.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Mr. Mussels, the Canadian Trade Commissioner at Leeds, has made a report to the Trade and Commerce Department that there is a marked falling off in the supply of bacon from Canada and the United States, and that British grocers are booming breakfast foods in place of it. Ten-year-old Boy Saves a Drowning Companion.

A despatch from Holden, Alta., says: Stewart Robinson, aged eight, the son of a farmer near here, had both feet severed by the knives of a mower driven by an older brother on Tuesday when he stumbled in front of the mower and his legs were caught in the cut-box. The brother stopped the bleeding by tying shoe laces around the mangled limbs, and although medical aid could not be secured for several hours, the boy has a fair chance for recovery.

CROWD WAS HOSTILE.

Crippen Was Hooted on Arrival at Euston Station.

A despatch from London says: Dr. H. H. Crippen and Miss Levepe were given a hostile reception by a mob on their arrival at Euston Station on Saturday evening. Crippen, who is on the verge of a nervous collapse, is being closely guarded. He slept little toward the end of the voyage over. He had many books, but read few of them. He talked little, but muttered to himself. Extra guards were placed over him during the last two nights of the ocean trip. Unseen by the passengers, the prisoner walked the top deck in the early morning and in the evening handcuffed to Inspectors Dew and Mitchell. Crippen had no communication with Miss Leneve, who went on deck in the evening with her wardresses. Miss Leneve was cheerful and talked freely to the wardresses. Inspector Dew fooled the waiting crowd at Liverpool, landing at the landing-stage aft, and taking his charges at once into the train for London.

NORFOLK APPLE CROP.

The Season's Output Sold to Lucknow Buyer.

A despatch from Simcoe says: Perhaps the most important deal in apples made in the Dominion this season was closed at Simcoe on Thursday last, when Mr. J. E. Johnson, manager of the Norfolk Fruit-growers' Association, closed out their season's pack, 30,000 barrels, to Mr. J. G. Anderson of Lucknow. One matter of great significance in connection with this referred to the Prussian Crown as bestowed by God's grace and not by Parliaments or people's assemblies, and laid a lance against the present movement for woman suffrage, is the political sensation of the hour. The leading organs of the German press devote extended comments to it, generally criticizing the Emperor's utterances, and there are indications that the discourse will have a deep political effect upon the country.

FARMS FOR PERSECUTED JEWS

Philanthropic Scheme to Settle 200,000 of Them in Alberta.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Particulars of a huge colonization scheme of a semi-philanthropic nature, promoted by prominent Jewish bankers and merchants of France, England and Russia, were made public here by a prominent English financier visiting Winnipeg. The scheme is to colonize two hundred thousand of the persecuted Jews of lower Russia on farms which will be prepared for them in Alberta. Agents of the syndicate are understood to have been in the west for several weeks, and to favor a large tract northwest of Edmonton. The present plan is to give the immigrants twenty years in which to pay for the farms.

season was closed at Simcoe on Thursday last, when Mr. J. E. Johnson, manager of the Norfolk Fruit-growers' Association, closed out their season's pack, 30,000 barrels, to Mr. J. G. Anderson of Lucknow. One matter of great significance in connection with this deal is the fact that up to about six years ago the county of Norfolk was practically unknown as an apple-growing district, when Mr. Johnson appeared on the scene, and with the co-operative organization of the Growers, the membership of which is 355, took up the work of good orchard management, and brought it to such perfection in these few short years that the eyes of the entire apple-purchasing world are now turned on Norfolk county.

Both engines were badly wrecked. Robert Weir, of Brockville, was engineer on the special, his fireman being a Montreal man. The latter sustained slight injuries.

BONDED CARS LOOTED.

FIRE TOLL TWO HUNDRED

The Official Report of the National Forest Superintendent.

A despatch from Spokane, Washington, says: Forest fires have slain more than two hundred persons, nearly all fire-fighters, in Idaho, according to figures compiled on Wednesday night from latest reports.

Superintendent Weigel, of the Cour d'Alene National Forest, after receiving many reports of disaster to various parties of his six hundred employees, posted a bulletin on Wednesday night in his office at Wallace, announcing the death of one hundred and fourteen men. He also expressed grave concern for the safety of Ranger Joseph B. Balm and seventy-four men, who were surrounded by fire Saturday night in the forest on the Big Fork of the Cour d'Alene River, near where another party lost thirteen men.

The charred bodies of twenty-five fire-fighters were found on Tuesday on Setzer Creek, in the St. Joe country. Two severely scorched Japanese dragged themselves to Avery, Idaho, on Tuesday night, and told of the death of ten of their companions. The twelve men, employees of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railroad, had gone out to fight fires. They were surrounded by flames, and only two men escaped. The number of deaths in Washington was on Wednesday reduced to three, all in the Pen d'Orielle Valley, near Newport. One of three victims, Mrs. Ernest Reinhardt, wife of a rancher, is the only woman known to have been burned to death in any of the fires.

NEW DISEASE IN CANADA

Two Cases of Infantile Paralysis Has Invaded This Country.

A despatch from Niagara Falls, Ont., says: Infantile paralysis has invaded Canada. Two cases are known here, one of which is in St. Catharines, the other at Moon Lake, Ont. Three-year-old Rosa Hipple of St. Catharines is seriously ill with the dread disease. She came to Canada from Cambridge, England, several months ago when the Hipple family removed to this country. Gertrude, the twelve-year-old daughter of George M. Tuttle, the County Attorney of Niagara County, and a prominent lawyer of Niagara Falls, N. Y., is suffering from the disease at the family's summer home at Moon Lake. Dr. Horton, Tuttle's family physician, and Dr. Mackenzie, Toronto, a specialist, are both in attendance.

The island is large and is one of the beauty spots in the vicinity of the city.

KILLED BY A BEAR.

A Travelling Showman was Torn to Pieces.

A despatch from Montreal says: Word reached the city on Friday night from St. Martine that a travelling showman with a bear, in the neighborhood, had been terribly mauled and killed while drunk by the animal, which he had omitted to muzzle. The man had been drinking in a tavern at St. Martine, leaving the bear tied in a camp on the outskirts. On returning he lay down to sleep, and the unmuzzled bear practically tore him to pieces.

McIntyre, big stock raisers of Lobo, where two fine cows are already dead and others are affected. The farm is a mile from that of D. Campbell, where a horse died last March from rabies, and eight people were sent to the Pasteur Institute for treatment. It is supposed McIntyre's cows were infected in some way from the horse.

GAYNOR'S WOUND HEALED.

TANK OF WHEY FELL.

YOUNG FOLKS

PRECIOUS STONES.

"At length the little princess wandered into a beautiful garden. Fountains showered pearls and sapphires into basins of the purest silver, and golden birds, flitting among the trees, brought huge diamonds, rubies and amethysts for her to play with."

Marion frowned and closed the fairy-tale book with a snap.

"O dear," she sighed, "I wish I could be a princess in a fairy-tale for once, and have rubies and diamonds to play with, and gather gold by the painful as the Princess Irene did!" and curling up on the sofa, she gazed disconsolately into the fireplace.

Aunt Grace stopped sewing and looked at her little niece; then smiling, she turned and looked out through the window. The lawn was velvety in the warm sunshine and ablaze with flowers. Out beyond, the yellow cornfields rippled in the wind, and through the violet marshlands the river curved and glittered.

"You can gather jewels far greater and more wonderful than those the little princess played with," said Aunt Grace, pushing the window up, "and you can walk on gold if you wish to, Marion."

Marion uncurred and sat up, her dark eyes wide with astonishment. "You cannot find them by frowning into a sooty fireplace," said Aunt Grace. "We must hunt for them; we may find the princess, too—who knows!" And laughing gaily, she began to fold her sewing.

The frown disappeared from Marion's face, and jumping up, she followed her aunt across the piazza and out on the green lawn.

"What jewel shall we look for first, and what color is it, Marion?"

"Rubies," said Marion, growing interested, "and they are red, a deep, beautiful red, and pearls are—"

"Hold on," said Aunt Grace; "one at a time, please. See! I have found rubies, gorgeous ones." And she stood with her eyes shaded, looking toward the south end of the garden.

"Where! I don't see any," said Marion, in a doubting tone.

"Look hard and you'll see them glowing and nodding in the sun."

"Oh, the roses!" cried Marion. "You mean flowers, don't you, aunt?"

"Yes, dear, I think the beautiful, fragrant, living flowers are the rarest gems of all. We will call them God's jewels. Just see how He has studded our garden with them!"

They had reached the roses by this time, and Marion, with eyes glowing, stooped and broke one off, smoothing its satiny petals with the tips of her fingers. She loved beautiful things, and this thought, that the flowers were God's jewels, was new and wonderful.

"See the blue forget-me-nots, Aunt Grace; they are turquoise, and the white pansies are pearls, and the purple are big amethysts. The asters must be topazes. Oh, how rich we are! Much richer than the Princess Irene, for our jewels are fragrant and growing, and in Much richer than the Princess Irene, for our jewels are fragrant and growing, and in each jewel are the seeds of a hundred more jewels. Uncle Ed cut one open once, and showed them to me."

Suddenly she remembered the gold.

"But, Aunt Grace, where is the gold?" she asked.

Slipping her arms round the little girl, Aunt Grace turned her round until she faced the corn-fields.

"Look, dear, and you'll see it rippling and sifting through everywhere."

"Oh, I see it! I see it, aunty!" cried Marion, jumping up and down. "It's the sunshine! God's gold, and it gilds everything—the fields, trees, and even the rocks. See! The dandelions on the lawn are junks of gold!"

Aunt Grace was brushing her hair back from her face, and the diamond upon her finger glittered in the sun.

"Aunty," said Marion, soberly, "we can't find any diamonds, and they are prettiest of all."

Aunt Grace turned and pointed down to the river, shimmering and flashing in the sunlight.

"See them, Marion!" she cried. "See them sparkle! Thousands upon thousands, each one set in silver and it looks as though we were going down to them," she added, as Uncle Ed came up from the barn with two long, slim oars on his shoulder.

Marion gazed at the river with a new wonder in her heart.

"I never noticed it was so beautiful before," she murmured. "There's something beautiful everywhere!"

"The fairy-tale has all come true, Aunt Grace!" she cried, throwing her arms round her aunt.

"And you may be the princess," exclaimed Uncle Ed, coming up in time to hear the last remark, "and I will row the princess up to the Eagle's Nest in time to watch the sun set! And then we will crown her queen!"

And handing the basket and oars to Aunt Grace, he swung Marion up to the dizzy height of his broad shoulders, and the three started merrily down the meadow toward the boat-house.—Youth's Companion.

Canadian Appreciation

Langham Hotel, London.

Gentlemen,—I wish to express my appreciation of the 38 h.p. Daimler which you have delivered to me. Before shipping the car to Canada I made a three weeks' trial of it, covering some 1,200 miles. The car ran perfectly, and I never had the slightest trouble of any kind, and I think it quite lives up to the many claims you make for it. The silence, smoothness of running, and power of acceleration on hills is really remarkable.

My petrol consumption was 16 miles to the gallon, including a great deal of driving in traffic. The tyres show no appreciable signs of wear, and I think it will prove light on tyres.

I am really delighted with the car.—Yours sincerely,

Story of a Young Man, a Girl and an Automobile.

By ALLAN P. AMES.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

"For downright chuckleheaded meanness," said King, "this town has everything in central New York pushed off the map."

"O-ho! Is that so-o?" said Zeb Williams, the town constable.

"I—I suppose you heard what I just said?" stammered the youth as he collided at the store door with a pretty girl. "I fear that in my haste I was too general. I didn't mean to include the whole town."

"You needn't explain," she said quickly. "I know how they treat people in automobiles."

King murmured something about its being of no consequence and had started toward his car when, to his surprise, she followed. "If you want to go to South Johnsville," she said, with friendly assurance, "I'll show you how."

"Somehow or other I've a notion you live in that big brick house back in the trees by the four corners. Get in and I can set you down at your door, and you can at the same time can point out which road I'm to take."

Then the girl surprised him again. She accepted the invitation.

In the seat beside him, she showed intelligent interest in his valves and levers, and the conversation during the brief but swift run to the crossroads was mainly technical in its nature.

"Let me take you around the square and finish the lesson," he said. "It's only four or five miles, and I've all afternoon to get where I'm going."

"I should just love to," she replied, with a frankness he had learned to

Mr. Adolph Warlick, who has been staying with relatives here for some time, returned last Monday to Saskatoon, Sask., where he has been residing for several years, while Mr. Reinhart Fritsch who has a good farm in Saskatoon, arrived here last Tuesday to reside on and work the farm he has here.

Mr. Thos. Pringle and his sons, Martin and Bruce, who have for some time been engaged at Temiskaming, Que., have arrived home. So have Gustav, John and Archie Blackley, who have been away in New Ontario since last fall.

Mr. E. C. Bebeer returned from a visit to North Bay and D. E. Youmans of Cache Bay, has been paying a visit to his relatives here.

Mr. Jas. Adams, of Kingston, who has been spending a couple of weeks with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. Adams here, has returned to the city.

Mr. Albert Stein of Brockville arrived here a few days ago to join his family who have been rusticated here for a couple of weeks already to renew old acquaintances and visit his old home.

Miss Dora Chatson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Chatson and Mr. Otto Fritsch, one of our most prosperous and esteemed young farmers, were married by Rev. J. Reble in the Lutheran Church last Thursday afternoon, in the presence of a large number of invited friends who, after the ceremony, repaired to the residence of the bride's parents where a richly decked table awaited them and where they enjoyed themselves in various ways until morning. Miss Cristina Chatson, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, Mr. Reinhart Fritsch, brother of the groom, as best man, and little Miss Mabel Stein as flower girl. The young couple will shortly leave for Saskatoon, where the bridegroom owns a good farm on which they intend to reside in the future. May a long and happy life be their portion.

IT GROWS HAIR

Here Are Facts We Want You To Prove at Our Risk.

Marvelous as it may seem, Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has grown hair on heads that were once bald. Of course, in none of these cases were the hair roots dead, nor had the scalp taken on a glazed, shiny appearance.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic acts scientifically, destroying the germs which are usually responsible for baldness. It penetrates to the roots of the hair, stimulating and nourishing them. It is a most pleasant toilet necessity, is delicately perfumed, and will not gum nor permanently stain the hair.

We want you to get a bottle of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic and use it as directed. If it does not relieve scalp irritation, remove dandruff, prevent the hair from falling out and promote an increased growth of hair, and in every way give entire satisfaction, simply come back and tell us, and without question or formality we will hand back to you every penny you paid us for it. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. Sold only at our store, The Rexall Store—T. B. Wallace.

"I HEREBY ARREST YE IN THE NAME OF THE LAW."

expect. "But I'm getting all dusty. Will you wait until I run up to the house and get a coat?"

"I'd wait—forever," asserted King.

Suddenly he felt a heavy hand on his shoulder and a triumphant shout in his ear:

"Quick, boys! I've got him! Here, you young squirt—no use tryin' to git away from me!"

King made a hard fight and with superhuman effort got the better of his opponent. Re-enforcements, however, deprived him of his advantage, for two brawny young farmers, arriving on the run, tore his grip loose, and Zeb, stepping to the ground and throwing back his coat to reveal a shining metal badge attached to his left suspender, announced:

"I hereby arrest ye in the name of the law fer exceedin' the speed limit."

"Thought ye'd show off before the squire's darter, didn't ye?" taunted one of the youths who had rescued the constable. "When her pap comes back ye'll have a chance to tell him all about it. He's justice of the peace, he is, and he's death on city scorchers."

"The squire won't be ter home till tomorrer," announced Zeb Williams. "But, with the help of these here bracelets, I guess we kin take good care of ye. Hey, boys?"

As he spoke he drew from his pocket a huge pair of antiquated iron handcuffs.

"Oh, see here," protested King, "you don't have to do that. I'm ready to pay my fine, but you have no right to put me in handcuffs."

"Guess I haven't been constable of this town fer twenty years without knowin' my rights," retorted Williams. "Hold him tight, boys."

Compared with the struggle that then ensued the previous bout between King and the constable was a mere sparring match, for as Williams advanced with the handcuffs extended King glimpsed a slim figure in a long gray coat emerging from the house, and the thought of appearing ridiculous in her eyes lent him the strength of two. But his assailants were three, and plow and shovel had made their muscles as hard as iron. As a result the bat and racket and car had rendered King's. And as the girl, quickening her pace at the unexpected sight, reached the gate an ominous double click announced that the irons had locked about his wrists.

Hampered as he was, King still fought, with elbows, with shoulders, with knees, with feet—fought as primitive man might have battled blind with rage against overwhelming odds—while the body of the car lurched on its excellent springs as if traveling over a hummocky road. But the three villagers were gradually crushing him into submission and in a few seconds more he must have yielded, a breathless and humiliated captive, when help came from an unexpected quarter. Fully occupied with the struggle, none of the four men noticed that the silent spectator had advanced beside the car. She leaned forward, avoiding with difficulty their thrashing bodies, and suddenly from the throbbing motor shot a series of those violent, unmissed explosions so alarming to uninitiated ears.

The effect upon Zeb Williams and his two panting aids was instantaneous. With smothered ejaculations they simultaneously let go the prisoner and straightened up to gaze in alarm at the hooded motor which seemed on the point of tearing itself to pieces.

SICK HEADACHE

A Symptom of Troubles Which are Removed by

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Sick headaches are not merely afflictions to be borne as patiently as possible—they are danger signals. They never come unless the digestive system is out of order, and their regular recurrence is proof positive of serious trouble and a warning that should be heeded promptly.

These terrible headaches permanently banished by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Sick headaches are caused by Indigestion, Biliousness or Constipation, and no amount of "headache powders" will do more than temporarily relieve them. The only way to get rid of them entirely is to cure the Constipation or Indigestion that is causing them, and nothing will do this quicker or more effectively than Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are purely vegetable in character, and are free from any harmful drug. For over fifty years they have been in constant use in Canada, and have proved most effective in regulating the bowels, aiding digestion, old friends already. I've heard Joe talk about you and your family ever since I knew him. In fact, the chance of seeing you was one of the inducements he offered in connection with this visit."

"Of course I'm Emily Verone," she replied. "Do you mean to say Joe never told you what I look like?" "Dozens of times. But—well, he always spoke as if you were a little girl with pigtails, and, besides, he never half did you justice."

"You might have suspected something when I was so ready to ride with you. Girls don't generally accept such an invitation, you know, from any stranger that happens along. Why, I knew who you were the minute you said South Johnsville."

For a moment King could think of no defense. But his crestfallen expression and the incongruously helpless figure he made, sitting disheveled and handcuffed by her side, dispelled Miss Verone's swift April anger more effectually than anything he could have said.

Suddenly she laughed aloud. "Won't Aunt Margaret and Joe be surprised when I come honking up to their door with a captive in chains?"

"Yes," agreed King with restored cheerfulness. "They'll wonder why you thought chains necessary."

Miss Verone regarded him severely. "A man in handcuffs shouldn't make speeches."

"Very well," he answered, unabashed. "I'll reserve the rest until we

A prolonged calm means lack of ventilation on a great scale. The winds serve to mix in normal proportions the gases which compose the atmosphere, and in this way they are conducive to health up to a certain point. Beyond about twenty miles an hour their influence begins to be unfavorable.—Chicago Tribune.

Dropped in on the Bears.

The removing of the polar bears at the zoo recalls that some years back a visitor dropped in on these bears. A hat fell into the pit, and its owner at once jumped in after it. He alighted on a bear who was enjoying a doze in the sun. The bear made him welcome. It seized him by the shoulder and waltzed him round and round. Luckily the visitor kept his feet until a keeper opened a side door and pulled him into safety. But the hat was left behind. On the following day the man sent to the society a letter in which he claimed the cost of a new hat.—London Tatler.

Watering the Horse.

It is allowable when a horse is hot to let him have three or four swallows of cool water, but no more. The few swallows will help cool him, and another limited drink may be given every few minutes for four or five times, after which he may drink his fill without danger. In careless or inexperienced hands, however, the only safe way is to let the horse stand for half an hour or more with no water until he is fairly cooled off.—Country Life in America.

Descriptive.

"The eye of a little miss was attracted by the sparkle of dew at early morning. 'Mamma,' she exclaimed, 'it's hotter'n I thought it was.' 'What do you mean?' 'Look here; the grass is all covered with perspiration.'—St. Louis Star.

Failures are with heroic minds the stepping stones to success.—Halliburton.

We tried soaps and powders and salves, but he got no better. He refused his food, got quite thin and worn, and was reduced to a very serious condition. I was advised to try Zam-Buk, and did so. It was wonderful how it seemed to cool and ease the child's burning, painful skin. Zam-Buk from the very commencement seemed to go right to the spot, and the pimples and sores and the irritation grew less and less. Within a few weeks my baby's skin was healed completely. He has now not a trace of rash, or eruption, or eczema, or burning

Then, before they had a chance to recover their wits, the car started forward with a jolt that threw all three over the mud guards into the road.

On being released King also had started to rise, but the jerk of the car only sent him sprawling back into the seat next the driver's. There his right shoulder came in contact with a gray clad arm stretched out to the steering wheel, and, twisting about, he found the seat he had formerly occupied filled by a young lady with flushed cheeks and tousled hair intent at that moment on checking the machine's advance into the fence. He had not seen her jump in, but he realized that she must have performed this hazardous feat in the extremely brief interval that had intervened since his antagonists had lurched out of the car.

By the time he had raised his manacled hands to help her the girl had already brought the automobile back on the road. Then he let his hands drop on his knees as he noted the skillful manner in which she manipulated the levers and sent the car skimming along at a speed that quickly placed them beyond hearing of the frantic commands of the constable. For a quarter of a mile Williams and his assistants kept up the hopeless pursuit. Then a bend in the road hid them from sight, and King saw them no more.

"And you let me think I was giving you your first lessons," said King, speaking for the first time.

The girl deftly brought the machine to half speed before she replied, and then she did not answer his implied question. "We ought to reach South Johnsville in fifteen or twenty minutes," she announced. "Whose house there shall I take you to?"

"Oh, look here," exclaimed the young man, all at once realizing his position. "I can't let you get into trouble on my account. Isn't there some blacksmith nearby where I can have these things fixed off?"

"No; it was my fault," she asserted. "I got you into this scrape, and I'm going to see you through. You needn't worry about me. My aunt, Mrs. Applewaite, lives in South Johnsville, and she'll see that I get back home all right."

"Mrs. Applewaite, did you say?" "Yes," responded the girl without meeting his gaze. "Do you know her?" "Know her?" cried King excitedly. "I should say I do. Why, it's her house I was bound for. Her son, Joe Applewaite, is one of my best friends, and I'm going there to stay over Sunday. "Say," he went on joyfully, leaning forward the better to see her face—"say, you aren't Emily Verone, are you? For if you are we're as good as with a capital A chain!" "Yes," agreed King with restored cheerfulness. "They'll wonder why you thought chains necessary." Miss Verone regarded him severely. "A man in handcuffs shouldn't make speeches." "Very well," he answered, unabashed. "I'll reserve the rest until we reach the Applewaites." "The rest?" "Yes. There are lots more things I might say. But haste isn't always wise, even for a man in an automobile." "There is no reason why we shouldn't go faster," said Miss Verone as she reached for the speed control.

WIND AND NERVES.

Effects of Breezes From the East, West and Northwest.

The east winds bug the earth closely and gather moisture, dust and bacteria. They are cold and humid, altogether forming an enervating influence on human and animal life and rendering it susceptible to the disease germs which the winds carry and disseminate.

The cool, pure northwest winds come from a region of dry, highly electrified air where ozone exists in comparatively large quantities. They are invigorating. The framework of nerves in the human being is like a delicate electrical apparatus, the nerves being the wires and the brain and ganglia receiving and distributing centers.

Every one knows that a telephone works better on a clear, dry day than on a wet, muggy one. The moist atmosphere lessens vitality. The nerve wires grow flaccid and heavy. The messages become confused. Hence low spirits, melancholia, distorted mental outlook, faulty assimilation, and disease.

The opposite effects flow from the northwest winds. The west and northwest winds keep the mucous membranes of the body in good work-

Zam-Buk from the very commencement seemed to go right to the spot, and the pimples and sores and the irritation grew less and less. Within a few weeks my baby's skin was healed completely. He has now not a trace of rash, or eruption, or eczema, or burning sore. Not only so, but cured of the tormenting skin trouble, he has improved in general health."

ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gardiner, Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic troubles and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash—and was entirely cured after three months' use of them."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and renewer of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

A Cargo Hard to Handle.
Asphalt is said to be the most difficult cargo for a vessel to unload. The asphalt is taken out of the asphalt lakes in Trinidad in a semifluid state and by the time the vessel reaches a northern port has hardened, so that to unload it it is necessary for the men to go into the hold and dig it out with pick and shovel. This takes time, and a vessel carrying such cargo always has to arrange for a considerable stay in port.

Hippocratic Face.
The hippocratic face is a condition of the human face produced by death, long illness, excessive hunger and the like. The nose is pinched, the temples hollow, the eyes sunken, the ears cold and retracted, the skin of the forehead dry, the complexion livid and the lips relaxed with cold. This appearance is so named from having been accurately described by Hippocrates, the father of medicine.—New York American.

Mr. Royden

An Episode of a Stranger's Entrance to New York Society

By GEORGE L. SYINGTON

Copyright, 1914, by American Press Association.

A group of young men were standing in the lobby of the U club of New York smoking cigarettes and chatting.

The small talk of the men standing in the lobby was diverted by the entrance of a young man who, passing the group, went to the office, called for letters, received several and went into the general lounging room to read them.

"Who is he?" asked one.

"Don't know," said another.

"He's not a member of the club," said a third. "Van Vechten put him up. His name is Royden."

"He's got some sort of social pull," a fourth put in. "He's thick with the Traceys. What Mrs. Tracey puts her stamp on goes."

"It doesn't matter to me," said one of the party. Horace Skinner, "who puts a stamp on him, he doesn't go with me."

This remark attracted attention. Skinner was cotillion leader to the set in question and could admit or decline to admit one who knocked at the golden door.

"What's the matter with him?" was asked. But Skinner walked away, leaving his friends to find out for themselves why he had put the stamp of his disapproval on Mr. Royden. All admitted that Royden had the manners of a gentleman, and from what little was known of his mental endowments they were at least respectable. But what had such qualifications to do with social life? People with brains, wealth, refinement were crowding upon the "holly numbers," as a wag facetiously called them, and here was a stranger about whom nothing was known who bid fair to walk in and make himself at home.

There is still to be found in the social swim of New York here and there some descendants of the leaders of half a century or more ago. These relics of the past may be rich or may be poor. They are there because they have always been there. Should they pass out and again seek admission they would be obliged to fight their way like the rest of those seeking entrance.

Of this class was Miss Van Vechten, whose brother had "put up" Mr. Royden as a guest at the U club. The Van Vechtens had once owned a farm in the middle of Manhattan Island, and of such is the oldest and best in New York society. Furthermore, Miss Van Vechten's ancestors were prominent in Revolutionary days. It was not to be expected that in her associations she would take her cue from any one. Indeed, frequently when she saw her social sisters who had sprung from a composition of rail or old magnates with hotel keepers' daughters snubbing some one she was quite likely to put upon the snubbed her own aristocratic seal.

Now, Mrs. Tracey, who introduced Mr. Royden, had made mistakes that had sapped her power. She had vouched for several persons simply on the ground that they were geniuses, and one or two of them had made scientific discoveries that would save the fathers had been wreckers and reorganizers of corporations and whose mothers in some instances had been toddlers in early life. It was these people whom the really aristocratic Miss Van Vechten loved to antagonize. The more they turned the cold shoulder on Royden the more Miss Van Vechten loaded him with favors. She was leader of a small set within the larger set and gradually withdrew the gentleman into this inner circle.

Had he been a man of that prominence especially desirable in the social world this would have been a masterly move, for no sooner would he have been admitted to Miss Van Vechten's coterie than he would have become desirable in a general way. As it was, his introduction only tended to make him a special rather than a universal member of the whole.

Meanwhile the only person who appeared to take no interest in Mr. Royden's social admission or rejection was Mr. Royden himself. He made no acquaintances at the club where he was a guest for the simple reason that the clubs of Gotham are places where small groups of men who are acquainted already sit at small tables and chat; others read the papers, while others, mostly bachelors, use it as a hotel. Nevertheless in certain respects it has its being as a whole. Mr. Royden found it a convenient place in which to write his letters and spend his time when not devoting himself to Miss Van Vechten. Indeed, having no occupation during his stay in New York and neither being interested in its social conditions nor its social conditions being interested in him, he must spend the time somewhere, and he found Miss Van Vechten's home very attractive. The Van Vechtens were a part of the "diamond horse-shoe," a name given to that curve of boxes at the Metropolitan Opera House leased or owned by New York's wealthy social magnates.

"There's Miss Van Vechten again," remarked a lady in the diamond circle, who in days gone by had pirouetted before the footlights, "with that Royden in her box. He's been there every night this week. I wonder if she is going to marry him."

"If she does she'll lose her social hold. The Van Vechtens haven't money enough to do what they please in society," said the descendant of a brewer, who sat beside her.

"Where did he come from anyway?" asked the first speaker.

"Australia or Canada or New Zealand. He's British, you know."

"What's he doing here?"

But the orchestra drowned the reply.

While Miss Van Vechten's taking up Mr. Royden had originally sprung from a natural feeling of a refined woman to take the part of a stranger against upstarts, there was that in the man which soon caused her to forget her motive in the interest he inspired in her. A fairly intelligent young woman, she was able to appreciate his knowledge of many subjects which go to make up the intellectual world. He had made a study of history, philosophically considered, the formation of nations, governments, constitutions—indeed, such information as might be beneficial to one who aims to follow public political life. International law seemed to be his hobby. Miss Van Vechten was disposed to draw him out on these subjects, which he presented to her in a way to insure her understanding of them. She did not wonder that a man who possessed such treasures within himself should be indifferent to the gilded circle.

It was in this way that Mr. Royden won his way, if not to Miss Van Vechten's heart, at least to a feeling that

3,000 YEARS AGO THE EGYPTIANS CURED DISEASE WITH FRUIT

To-day, Canadians Are Doing It With "Fruit-a-tives"

—The Famous Fruit Medicine

We are apt to consider the age we live in as the most wonderful age that the world has ever known. It is, in many respects. Yet the ancients surpassed us in some things. Engineers of our 40-story sky-scrapers still marvel at the massive pyramids and the sphinx. So, too, the Egyptian physicians of 3,000 years ago, used fruit juices as a medicine for treating blood trouble, liver and kidney disease, and stomach weakness. Their method of mixing fruit juice as a medicine, is also one of the lost arts. A well known Canadian physician, however, perfected a method of utilizing fruit juices, which is one of the greatest discoveries of modern medical research.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the natural cure for Chronic Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Torpid Liver, Kidney Disease, Pain in the Back, Bad Complexion, Rheumatism, Nervousness, Headache and Neuralgia.

she was entertaining. Mrs. Tracey excused herself in the statement that a prominent scientist whom she had introduced and whom society had snubbed had given the marquise a letter to her, at the same time advising him to visit New York incog.

Then came the news of the engagement of the marquise to Miss Van Vechten. If the women were wroth at being deprived of the honor of entertaining the diplomat, the younger ladies were positively mad to think that none of their number had had an opportunity to catch him, that advantage having been appropriated by Miss Van Vechten herself.

THE OPIUM HABIT.

Its Effects as Described by Bill Nye in His Memoirs.

I have always had a horror of opiates of all kinds. They are so seductive and so still in their operations. They steal through the blood like a wolf on the trail and they seize on the heart with their white fangs till it is still forever.

Up the Laramie there is a cluster of ranches at the base of the Medicine Bow, near the north end of Sheep Mountain. Well, a young man whom we will call Curtis lived at one of these ranches years ago, and, though a quiet, mind-your-own-business fellow who had absolutely no enemies among his companions, he had the misfortune to incur the wrath of a tramp shepherd, who waylaid Curtis one afternoon and shot him dead as he sat in his buggy. Curtis wasn't armed.

A rancher came into town and telegraphed to Curtis' father, and then half a dozen citizens went out to help capture the herder, who had fled to the foothills.

They didn't get back till toward day-break, but they brought the herder with them. I saw him in the gray of the morning, lying in a coarse gray seal.

Now, Mrs. Tracey, who introduced Mr. Royden, had made mistakes that had sapped her power. She had vouched for several persons simply on the ground that they were geniuses, and one or two of them had made scientific discoveries that would save the lives of millions of human beings. She had not considered that such persons had no place in society. Consequently when she took up Mr. Royden an opposition to his admission sprang up on the part of certain young women whose out on these subjects, which were presented to her in a way to insure her understanding of them. She did not wonder that a man who possessed such treasures within himself should be indifferent to the gilded circle.

It was in this way that Mr. Royden won his way, if not to Miss Van Vechten's heart, at least to a feeling that she would like just such a man for a husband. She encouraged him to ask for her, not that she would or would not accept him, but that she might have the choice of doing either one or the other.

Now, all this happened within the short space of a few weeks. Mr. Royden's stay in Gotham was coming to an end. No one knew it except himself, but he knew it very well. One day he announced his coming departure to Miss Van Vechten.

Mr. Royden had been very uncommunicative, even to Miss Van Vechten. When he said he was going she knew no more about where he would go than where he had come from. But she was too well bred to ask him. Nevertheless, he told her the story. Moreover, he asked her to be his wife.

The day before Royden left New York he was sitting in the lounging room of the U club reading a newspaper. Near him at a table, partaking of refreshments, were several of the members of that party who had discussed him when he had entered the building several weeks before. Among them was Skinner, the cotton leader.

"These that fellow Royden over there," remarked Skinner. "He doesn't seem to have made much headway in society. I seldom meet him anywhere."

"How do you know he cares to be met?" asked another.

"I don't."

"Nobody seems to know anything about him," remarked another. "Mrs. Tracey can't find these people on society as she once did. She's failed at that."

At that moment a stranger entered the room and, catching sight of Royden, rushed up to him with extended hand.

"Hello, Bob!" he cried. "I haven't seen you since we left Oxford. I'm mighty glad to meet you, old man, and to congratulate you on the position you have attained. Why are you not in Washington?"

"Going tomorrow; have been waiting for the minister."

The man who had entered, seeing a friend in Skinner, nodded to him and after a brief talk with Royden beckoned him to join them. Skinner did so and was introduced to Royden.

"This is my friend the Marquis of Hesselington. He is on a diplomatic mission to settle some matters about fisheries or something."

Mr. Skinner bowed obsequiously.

"I have heard of the marquis as Mr. Royden," he remarked.

"What's that?" said the introducer. "Been going facog., Bob? Using your own name instead of your title?"

"I have been obliged to do so for reasons connected with the diplomatic service."

"I see."

Then Mr. Skinner asked the marquis if he could not be of some service to him during the rest of his stay in New York, to which the marquis replied that he was leaving the next day.

That evening the news spread among the gilded circle that the oldest son of a British duke and a prominent diplomat had been in New York incog., and no one except Mrs. Tracey, who alone knew who he was, and Miss Van Vechten, who didn't, had had the honor of entertaining him. Everybody blamed the former for not making known the rank of the man she had introduced, and nobody believed but that Miss Van Vechten knew all the while who a hatter came into town and telegraphed to Curtis's father, and then half a dozen citizens went out to help capture the herder, who had fled to the foothills.

They didn't get back till toward day-break, but they brought the herder with them. I saw him in the gray of the morning, lying in a coarse gray blanket on the floor of the engine house. He was dead.

I asked, as a reporter, how he came to his death and they told me, "opium." The murderer had taken poison when he found that escape was impossible.

I was present at the inquest so that I could report the case. There was very little testimony, but all the evidence seemed to point to the fact that life was extinct, and a verdict of death by his own hand was rendered.

It was the first opium work I had ever seen, and it aroused my curiosity. Death by opium, it seems, leaves a dark ring around the neck. I did not know this before. People who die by opium also tie their hands together before they die. This is one of the eccentricities of opium poisoning that I have never seen laid down in the books. I bequeath it to medical science. Whenever I run up against a new scientific discovery I just hand it right over to the public without cost.

Ever since the above incident I have been very apprehensive about people who seem to be likely to form the opium habit. It is one of the most deadly narcotics, especially in a new country.

Caught a Tartar.

Senator Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, who is a bachelor and has never been ensnared by the wiles of women, tells a story of a young lady and a judge of his acquaintance. The former was a witness in the latter's court. The prosecuting attorney had repeatedly put to her questions which she persistently evaded under the plea that she did not comprehend his meaning, whereupon his honor undertook to bring out the proper responses. Leaning over, he said in a kindly and fatherly manner:

"Young woman, why is it that you insist in refusing to understand the questions of counsel? You are a person of charm, grace, beauty and more than average intelligence and"—

"Thank you, your honor," interrupted the young woman, "if it were not for the fact, judge, that I am under oath I would return the compliment."—National Monthly.

The "Sting" of Death.

The sting of death physically is nothing; a man who has lost consciousness in the water, a man who has been under an anaesthetic, a man stunned in an accident—these have been in effect dead, and yet they know nothing of death. In speaking of it the most glaring contradictions pass quite naturally for axioms. It is the "gentle hapd," but it is also the "grisly terror." It is "beautiful" and "wonderful," but it is also "terrible."—London Spectator.

Didn't Give Him the Chance.

Schopenhauer, when staying in Geneva, used to go every day to a table d'hôte at which now and then appeared other distinguished visitors. Once Lady Byron sat next to him.

"Doctor," said the host after she had left, with a twinkle in his eye, "doctor, do you know who sat next to you at the table today? It was Lady Byron."

"Why the deuce did you not tell me this before?" replied Schopenhauer; "I should have liked to be rude to her."

"That was what I feared," said the host, "and for that reason I kept it quiet."

A MODERN SCALPER.

The Little Comedy That Was Played Between the Acts.

A little comedy between acts enlivened things at a Broadway theater one night last week. A middle aged man accompanied by his wife sat directly behind a pretty young girl and her escort. At the end of the first act the middle aged man went out for "fresh air." He came back bringing the smell of the fresh air and gayer spirits with him. His wife gave him a startled glance, and like a flash her hand went up to his vest. There dangling from the top button was a bunch of brown, curly puffs. There was a dynamical second as the wife held the puffs in her white gloved hand and looked at them. Now she was not a jealous wife—just a common sense little woman, ready to meet an emergency. She looked at the heads about her. The pretty girl's back hair looked as if a piece had fallen out. The wife leaned over to the side away from the girl's escort and whispered. The girl stopped a hand down and back, and the wife stealthily laid the bunch of puffs which her husband had carried away on his vest button in the owner's hand. The latter kept them concealed, gently and artfully reached up, pinned them into place, and escort, watching the rising curtain, was none the wiser.

HIS STUPID MISTAKE.

Much to His Surprise It Was Promptly Rectified.

A well known Londoner was planning an entertainment on an elaborate scale to be given to various friends in the neighborhood of his country seat. Unfortunately his nearest neighbor, a close relative, is highly ungenial to himself and his intimates, and he racked his brains to devise a scheme by which he might avoid the necessity of inviting the undesirable cousin to be among his guests.

"I have it!" he announced to his wife at breakfast on the morning of the event. "I'll send him some tickets for the play tonight in town. Of course he'll be delighted, as he seldom has an opportunity of going to the theater."

The tickets were accordingly sent, and the host with an easy conscience proceeded to enjoy the company of his friends. But his satisfaction was of short duration. At the height of the festivities, much to his surprise, in walked the objectionable neighbor.

"Such a stupid mistake you made!" he announced as he approached his cousin. "As soon as I heard about your party I knew that you must have sent me the tickets for the wrong night, so I got them changed for tomorrow evening and came right over here as soon as I could."—London Tatler.

What Napoleon Couldn't Do.

An incident connected with Napoleon when he was in exile in Elba is commemorated on the island to this day by an inscription affixed to the wall of a peasant's house. A man named Giacconi was plowing when the famous exile came along one day and expressed an interest in his work. Napoleon even took the plow handles and attempted to guide it himself, but the oxen refused to obey him, overturned the plow and spoiled the furrow. The inscription runs thus:

"Napoleon the Great, passing by this place in MDCCCXIV, took in the neighboring field a plow from the hands of a peasant and himself tried to plow, but the oxen, rebellious to those hands which yet had guided Europe, headlong fled from the furrow."—St. Louis Republic.

A Big System That is Shaping up in Ontario, and That Will Devote Itself to the Needs of This Province.

(Toronto World)

The World's articles on the railway question in the Province of Ontario have stirred things up and results are already to be noticed. The Canadian Pacific are evidently going to do something of a rather surprising character. Vice-President McNicoll has found it necessary to come to town and say that things will be doing in a very short time, though the details are not for the present made known.

But there is relief almost immediately in sight in the way of competition with the Canadian Pacific and the Grand Trunk to the east of Toronto, and of the rapid and quick delivery of imports from Europe to Toronto right up to Sudbury.

This first and immediate relief is to come from the Canadian Northern, which is rapidly developing into a great Ontario system. The World got wind of the latest move in this direction, and it shows how quickly the Canadian Northern moves and how extensive its moves are. This last move is the purchase of the Rathbun line, known as the Bay of Quinte Railway, which touches Deseronto, Napanee, Newburgh and Harrowsmith, Sydenham, and also has an extension from Yarker north to Bannockburn, in Hastings County, and running right also into Kingston over the Kingston & Pembroke from Harrowsmith south. This means that the Canadian Northern will change their line east somewhat. They will construct, as already announced, their line from Toronto to Trenton and this is now being constructed, and will be finished by Christmas; but they will also extend this line from Trenton (south of the Grand Trunk) through the city of Belleville to Deseronto, on the Bay of Quinte, making the most southerly line in the County of Hastings. At Deseronto they will get on the rails of the Bay of Quinte Railway, referred to above, and run over that line from Deseronto, through Napanee, Newburgh and Yarker, which latter two points are some distance north of the Grand Trunk, to Sydenham, in the County of Frontenac, a distance of, say, 30 miles. From Sydenham, or thereabout to Ottawa is only 92 miles, and they propose to almost immediately build from Sydenham to Ottawa by way of Smith's Falls. From Ottawa they have their line now completed to Hawkesbury, into the Province of Quebec, to the city of Quebec with a branch from this latter line into Montreal. In other words—and this is the surprising announcement that the World is making—with the road already under way between Toronto and Deseronto, which will be completed by Christmas, the Canadian Northern has only to build some 90 odd miles from the present terminal of the Rathbun line at Sydenham to the capital, and then the line is completed from Gowganda Junction away north of Sudbury right down through Sudbury, Parry Sound and Key Harbor on Georgian Bay to Toronto, and from Toronto to Quebec; making a third great Ontario system and doing business into Toronto over all this distance and over the feeder lines in less than a year, giving competition to both the Canadian Pacific and the Grand Trunk, via the Str. Lawrence ports of Montreal and Quebec to the Atlantic traffic, to the imports of Toronto from Europe.

This is best illustrated by the fact that

The Canadian Northern in 1911 will be an active competitor for all this business, and the Canadian Northern has only then the 500 odd miles from Gowganda Junction (north of Sudbury) to Port Arthur to build in order to have their transcontinental system completed from Quebec to Edmonton, via Montreal, Toronto, Parry Sound, Key Harbor, Port Arthur, Winnipeg, Edmonton. This is the biggest and mightiest move of Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann in transcontinentalizing their system and making themselves a great big factor in railway transportation in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

It will be remembered that only a few weeks ago the Canadian Northern also acquired the Central Ontario road from Picton north to Bancroft, and that they also acquired the Brockville & Westport, and also the frondale line. These recent railway acquisitions in Ontario total up 350 miles. These lines involve many other lines, as well as cut-offs and loops for shortening and consolidation purposes. A short line from Hawkesbury to Montreal will take the place of the present one by Joliette Junction.

As soon as the Toronto and Ottawa line gets to Deseronto this winter all the country traversed by the Central Ontario, Irondale & Bancroft, Westport & Brockville, Harrowsmith & Kingston, Bay of Quinte, becomes for the first time directly tributary to Toronto, about 350 miles. Toronto will also have competition with the Grand Trunk from Toronto to Kingston and Brockville, and with most of the Canadian Pacific between Toronto and Ottawa.

Leaving out the line about the north shore of Lake Superior, this Ontario end of the system includes over fifteen hundred miles of railway built, or to be completed, by 1911, and every mile of it making new business or competitive rates for Toronto. It also makes the Canadian Northern a steamship and rail route from Europe to Toronto and all the points mentioned. The Canadian Northern have a line of lake boats from Montreal to Port Arthur, so that they are to-day in this way handling under one management western grain and return freights from Bristol to the Rocky Mountains. The Canadian Northern's headquarters will always be in Toronto, and other new lines of a rather extensive character in this province are to be expected.

THE DRAGOON COTILLION.

During the past few weeks the people of the various parts of Ontario have seen the troopers of the Royal Canadian Dragoons on duty for the preservation of law and order at points affected by the Grand Trunk strike. At the coming Canadian National Exhibition they will have an opportunity of seeing them in a more attractive guise when picked riders will execute in front of the grand stand the beautiful and intricate figures of "The Dragoon Cotillion." This embraces all the picturesque and complicated figures of the stateliest of old-fashioned dances. As the cotillion reaches its climax the movements attain a puzzling complexity out of which horses and riders extricate themselves in a most graceful and precise manner. The spectacle in daylight as the red coated horsemen perform their evolutions with set lances and bannerettes fluttering in the breeze is beautiful in the extreme, but it does not equal in any sense the exquisite picture at night when each lance point is tipped with an electric light. This episode is invariably greeted, with their riders with applause by the thousands who nightly visit the Canadian National Exhibition.

system and doing business into Toronto to over all this distance and over the feeder lines in less than a year, giving competition to both the Canadian Pacific and the Grand Trunk, via the Str. Lawrence ports of Montreal and Quebec to the Atlantic traffic, to the imports of Toronto from Europe. This is best illustrated by the fact that the traffic that was most congested in the recent freight jam on the C.P.R. was the imports of Toronto merchants from Europe, which had been landed at Montreal, and have not yet been delivered. The Canadian Northern has its own Atlantic line, so it can land goods from Europe and deliver clean up to Gowganda Junction, including Toronto.

THE QUEEN'S HOUSEHOLD

WOMEN WHO OCCUPY POSTS OF HONOR IN IT.

Duties of the Eight Ladies Who Fill the High and Honorable Positions.

The ladies of Queen Mary's household are divided into four classes. First come the mistress of the robes, then the ladies of the bedchamber, usually styled ladies in waiting, women of the bedchamber and maids of honor. Queen Victoria as a reigning sovereign had eight ladies of each class in her household, says the Gentlewoman.

The number retained by a queen consort, however, varies according to her pleasure and convenience. Queen Mary has at present in her service one lady in waiting, three extra ladies in waiting and four women of the bedchamber. Maids of honor had not been appointed at the time of writing.

The office of mistress of the robes to a queen regnant is a political one and changes with the Government; but that of a queen consort is in her own gift and may be held for an indefinite period. The mistress of the robes must always be a duchess, whereas in case of a queen consort a widowed duchess may be appointed if more convenient.

MISTRESS OF THE ROBES.

The duties of a mistress of the robes are limited to State occasions. This high official is in the royal suite at court, palace balls and at the meeting of Parliament. At such times she stands behind the Queen, and she walks behind her royal mistress in any state procession. Also when a procession drives through the streets the carriage in which she is seated follows next after the state carriage of the sovereigns.

Her duties are many at the time of a coronation, and during the ceremony she is in close attendance on her royal lady. When their Majesties are in London a mistress of the robes resides in her own house and is conveyed to and from the scene of her duties in one of the royal carriages. But if the court is at Windsor she remains under the roof of Windsor Castle.

The Duchess of Devonshire, who has been chosen to fill this high post, is the elder daughter of Lord and Lady Lansdowne. She is tall and fair and dignified, fond of home life and a devoted mother to her seven children. She has the grand manner and will no doubt be one of our leading hostesses; but on account of mourning Devonshire House has not as yet under her reign been the scene of any society entertainments.

A LADY OF THE BEDCHAMBER

to either a Queen Regent or a Queen Consort must be a peeress. Her "wait" varies from three weeks to a month, according to the Queen's convenience. And whether she is at her own home in London or staying at Windsor Castle she must always hold herself in readiness and consider her time as entirely at her royal lady's disposal. She would be in attendance on the Queen at balls, dinners, weddings or any other formal entertainment the left side of the bodice and used as a decoration. And the badge is retained for life and not given up on marriage or when leaving the royal service. The office of maid of honor is highly esteemed, as it gives much social status and in the end often leads to a successful marriage.

Queen Mary has appointed Lady Shaftesbury as her lady of the bedchamber. Lady Shaftesbury has many charms and graces and as Lady Grosvenor's daughter it may be guessed that she is clever and cultured beyond the average. She likes books and reading, is fond of music and when in town may often be seen at the opera and at concerts both public and private. She is a good hostess and receives many parties at St. Giles's House, in Dorset.

To write of jewels sounds hackneyed, but it may be said that Lady Shaftesbury has one most cherished ornament. This is the brooch given her by Sir Thomas Lipton when she christened his yacht Shamrock III. It shows the Shamrock's flag in emeralds and the flag of the Royal Ulster Yacht Club in enamel and sapphires, while between these are a shamrock and the figure III. in large diamonds. Lady Shaftesbury has two little girls and a son and heir, Lord Ashley.

Queen Mary has chosen Lady Airlie, Lady Bradford and Lady Lamington as her extra ladies in waiting. Lady Airlie is sister to Lord Arran, Lady Esther Smith and Lady Salisbury. She suffered a sad bereavement in the death of her husband, who was killed in the Boer war, and she now resides with her youthful son, the present Lord Airlie, at Cortachy Castle in Scotland. Her still young and beautiful face is framed in a cloud of soft gray hair and she has a gentle and most attractive personality. Some time ago she went to South Africa to visit the grave of her husband, as he was by his own will buried where he fell on Diamond Hill. Lady Airlie is fond of flowers and at her Scotch home has made a garden of friendship, where every flower has been planted by a personal friend or a visitor of distinction.

REAL RULER OF GERMANY

IS FORMER NEWSPAPERMAN, WHO WIELDS GREAT POWER

Hammann Controls Press Department of German Foreign Office.

The assumption of his official duties by the new German Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter, which has just taken place, serves to emphasize the fact, says the Berlin correspondent of The London Daily Express, that the real controller of Germany's foreign policy and the virtual "boss" of the Imperial Government is an ex-journalist—Privy Councillor Hammann—now the senior member of the permanent staff of the Foreign Office.

Herr Hammann, who is a man of academic education, and possesses the degree of doctor of laws, was a comparatively unknown newspaper writer when, some seventeen years ago, he attracted the attention of the Imperial Chancellor of that period, General Count Caprivi, by writing a pamphlet on the best methods of combating the alarming growth of in the Kaiser's dominions. Count Caprivi was so impressed by the talent revealed in that essay that he brought about Herr Hammann's appointment to control the Press Department of the German Foreign Office.

The department exists to enable the German Government to keep a close grip both on the home and foreign newspaper press. It is fully recognized in Berlin that Press inspiration is one of the most important adjuncts of government, and that it is worth while maintaining a separate department of the Foreign Office simply and solely for the purpose of influencing the newspapers of the world in a way calculated to serve Germany's interests.

This task has been under Privy Councillor Hammann's management for a decade and a half, and in discharging his duties he has made himself the most powerful man in the German Empire, next to the Kaiser, and there are good reasons for believing that William II. himself stands somewhat in awe of the Privy Councillor Hammann wields more power behind the scenes than the Imperial Chancellor himself, and it is an open secret that he ejected the last Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Baron von Schoen, from office.

Having disposed of the last Secretary of State, Privy Councillor Hammann gave a fresh proof of his power by creating the new Secretary of State, Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter.

Privy Councillor Hammann created and maintains his influence by his grip on the newspaper press, and thus indirectly supplies the proof that even in the semi-absolute monarchies of Continental Europe the newspaper is a potent instrument of government. There is a certain irony of fate in the rise weeks to a month, according to the Queen's convenience. And whether she is at her own home in London or staying at Windsor Castle she must always hold herself in readiness and consider her time as entirely at her royal lady's disposal. She would be in attendance on the Queen at balls, dinners, weddings or any other formal entertainment and of course at all state ceremonies.

Extra ladies of the bedchamber are appointed according to the royal pleasure, but they have no salary and no fixed "waits" in attendance. Ladies who take office as women of the bedchamber must have rank, but they need not be peeresses. Their "waits" are arranged in the same way as those of ladies in waiting.

Maids of honor are usually the ladies youngest in age in the Queen's household. They must be either the daughters of viscounts or barons, or else the granddaughters of dukes, marquises and earls are of too high rank for the position.

Maids of honor do duty in couples. The time of waiting is four weeks, and each maid is in attendance for that period about three times in the course of twelve months. When the court is in London the maids of honor reside in their own homes, and not at Buckingham Palace, but as in the case of the other court ladies, a royal carriage is sent to convey them to and from the scene of action.

A MAID OF HONOR

does not drive with the Queen or attend her Majesty at dinners, but she is often on duty at the opera, and on all state occasions she forms part of the suite or takes her place in the royal procession. When the court is at Windsor a maid of honor resides at the castle and is in rather close attendance. One graceful duty is to hand a bouquet of flowers to her royal mistress when the state procession passes on its way to the dining room.

Maids of honor receive much goodness from their royal lady, but a few wise rules are made which needless to say, are carefully observed. "Picture" hats and an outre style of dress is not allowed, and a maid of honor while on duty may not play cards for money or go out alone on foot in the streets of London. She must either be accompanied by a friend or by some part of duenna.

A maid of honor is expected to be clever and accomplished. She must be a good linguist, talk well and be a practised reader aloud. Also she should be bright, quick and clinging and possess that politeness of tongue punctuality. It is also assumed that her lips will be sealed as regards the private affairs of royalty and the ways and manners of the household.

If a maid of honor chances to be a peer's daughter she of course bears the courtesy title of "honorable," but if not she is invested with that style and title immediately after her appointment. And then she bears for life, whether single or married. And she receives a badge of office, which takes the form of a miniature of the

SCOTCH BARONET A SAINT.

Gives Up Estates and Labors as Missionary Monk Until Blind.

Although British baronets have the reputation of being wicked, probably owing to the fact that the villain of almost every melodrama is "a bald, bad baronet," there are some of them who are almost saints. To the latter category belongs Sir David Hunter Blair, a barefoot monk of the Order of St. Benedict, who, after spending a number of years laboring in the swamp districts of the Amazon River to convert the natives to Christianity, has now returned home to Europe perfectly blind, in the faint hope that some miracle may be accomplished toward the restoring of his eyesight by the world famed oculist, Professor Pagenstecher at Weisbaden.

The baronet graduated from Oxford and married. Upon his wife's death he obtained special permission from the Pope to take orders and turned over the family's Ayrshire estate to his brother, a naval captain.

Sir David, who is the fifth baronet of his line, has also done missionary work in Patagonia. He is the only monk on record who belongs to any clubs, having retained his membership in the Caledonian, in Edinburgh, and of the Conservative, in London.

KRUPPS MAKE AWFUL BOMB.

New Destroyer Which Scatters Poisonous Gases.

The Krupps have invented and are making for the German Government a new kind of siege gun said to be more terrible in its possibilities of destruction than anything hitherto in use. The new type of ordinance is called a "bomb-cannon," and is intended for use by besiegers during the final storming of fortresses, when the besiegers' own guns cannot be fired owing to the danger of hitting their own men.

The bomb will supplant the hand grenade so much used during the storming of the forts at Port Arthur. In addition to the damage it causes by explosion it will spread poisonous gases.

Krupp's daughter who is his sole heir and who is responsible for the management of the works, is said to have protested at first against the "bomb-gun," especially the arrangement by which poisonous gases are spread. She is understood to have become an ardent secret friend of the Carnegie propaganda for peace by arbitration. The experts in the gun works represented to her, it is reported, that the "bomb-guns" are mainly to be made as siege deterrents.

HOME RULE FOR SCOTLAND.

The Movement is Steadily Gaining Strength.

The movement in favor of home rule for Scotland with regard to its purely local affairs is steadily gaining strength. The Scottish National Committee, which is composed of a number of the leading Scottish M. P.'s, has issued a striking manifesto, in which it says:—

The settlement of the constitutional question will offer an opportunity for reorganizing Parliamentary business on a basis of devolution. Ireland's claim to self-government is not likely to be overlooked; that of Scotland is, in its own way, no less urgent.

A policy of devolution for Scottish affairs involves a break with the antiquated procedure of two centuries. This procedure was imposed upon us at the union, when Scotland was practically delivered into the hands of bureaucracy.

Scotland is frequently legislated for as an afterthought. Clauses dealing with her affairs are unexpectedly tacked on to bills intended to deal with purely English questions. Such Scottish legislation as is introduced is initiated by the permanent officials of the different boards, is prepared in London, and becomes a Government bill before Scottish members have had a chance of discussing their views before those responsible for its introduction. This has been the fate of Scotland under all Governments. The problem before us is to devise some system of representative control over Scottish affairs in Scotland, a principle which, if applied to the different parts of the United Kingdom, would provide for a true expression of its own affairs, leaving the Imperial Parliament free to transact the business of the Empire.

LONDON'S POVERTY.

In June Last There Were 116,016 Paupers in That City.

London does not hide its poverty, and London's poverty makes no effort to hide itself. According to official statistics there were in London on June 25 last 116,016 paupers, persons in receipt of relief from public charities. This provides a ratio of pauperism of 24 per thousand of population.

The number of paupers in receipt of relief in England and Wales on June 25 was 762,111; indoor paupers totalled 260,449; outdoor, 501,662. The rate of pauperism to population in England and Wales is 21.3 per thousand.

It is encouraging to observe that the rate is slowly diminishing. There are various causes suggested for the existence of this vast number of paupers, but the economists cannot agree upon any single cause for it. That it exists is fact enough for the average Londoner.

NEW TERROR FOR FORGER.

Crime Can be Detected by His Pulse Beats.

A new means of detecting forgery is promised by Dr. Lindsay Johnson, a London ophthalmic surgeon and author of many scientific works, who has just elaborated a new theory with regard to individuality in writing.

He maintains that in certain diseases a person's pulse beats are individual and that no one suffering from any such diseases can control even for a brief space of time the frequency or peculiar irregularities of his heart's action as shown by a chart recording his pulsation. Such a chart is obtained for medical purposes by means of a sphygmograph, an instrument fitted to the patient's wrist and supplied with a needle which automatically records on a prepared sheet of paper, the peculiar force and frequency of the pulsation.

Dr. Lindsay Johnson holds the opinion that the pen in the hand of a writer serves in a modified degree the same end as the sphygmograph and that in a person's handwriting one can see by projecting the letters, greatly magnified, on a screen the scarcely perceptible turns and quivers made in the lines by the spontaneous action of that person's peculiar pulsation.

To prove this the doctor carried out an experiment at Charing Cross Hospital. At his request a number of patients suffering from heart and kidney diseases wrote the Lord's Prayer in their ordinary handwriting. The different manuscripts were then taken and examined microscopically. By throwing them, highly magnified, on a screen, the jerks or involuntary motions due to the patient's peculiar pulsations were distinctly visible.

The handwriting of persons in normal health, says Dr. Lindsay Johnson, does not always show their pulse beats. What one can say, however, is that when a document purporting to be written by a certain person contains traces of pulse beats and the normal handwriting of that person does not show them, then clearly the document is a forgery.

ANCIENT BRITISH SHIPS.

One is 122 Years Old and Another Ten Years Younger.

Some ancient ships that rival even the celebrated American schooner Polly must be placed to the credit of Great Britain. First in order of age is the Jenny of Carnarvon, 122 years old. The next is the May, of Whitehaven, sometimes called the Molly Ashcroft to distinguish her from other Mays. The May was built at Cowes in 1788, so that she is 112 years old, ten years older than the Polly.

Her present owner regularly fishes in her with a crew of three or four. She is a jigger smack. She was dismasted in a gale last winter but she is in first-class trim to-day and her owners speak highly of her seagoing qualities.

Eighteen years ago the May was practically rebuilt, but a boat must be essentially sound to stand extensive repairs, and the fact therefore does not really detract so much as one might think from the wonder of her immense age.

SOME CURIOUS PATENTS.

INVENTIONS BY MECHANICAL GENIUSES.

Hat Which Raises Itself When Wearer Bows—Secret Societies' Goat.

Some curious inventions for which patents have been granted at Washington recently form the subject of an article in The New York Times. A Des Moines man has obtained a patent for a self-tipping hat, which is designed to save the popular person from the fatiguing labor of removing his hat every time he meets one of the fair sex with whom he is acquainted.

"Much valuable energy is utilized in tipping the hat repeatedly," says the inventor, "and my device will relieve one of it and at once cause the hat to be lifted from the head in a natural manner." It is a novel device, in other words, "for effecting polite salutations by the elevation and rotation of the hat on the head of the saluting party, when said person bows to the person saluted, the actuation of the hat being produced by mechanism within it, and without the use of the hands in any manner."

No truly rural person could ever have been responsible for the invention of which was protected by United States patents recently. The glasses are modelled much after the fashion of grandpa's 'specs,' the nose rest being enlarged to go over the chicken's head, while the ear hooks are joined in the back.

No claim is made that the chicken's eyesight is poor, or that magnifiers ever are needed that it may the better discover the reluctant worm or the elusive bug, but the inventor does say that the glasses "are designed to prevent chickens pecking out each other's eyes." The inventor's attempt to enforce all chickens to wear the device by legislative action in Kansas did not succeed.

Members of secret societies, who sometimes may be put to much trouble to secure a sufficiently irascible goat for the purpose of initiating new members in their respective lodges, will be glad to learn that an inventive genius has come to their assistance. The device is which can be put in the closet when not needed; that requires no feeding, and practically no care. Also it may be handled by its keeper without fear of consequences. This mechanical goat is mounted on a tripod which runs on three wheels, the front one being loosely pivoted. A handle in the rear is for the purpose of pushing it.

The candidate, blindfolded, is led to the side of the animal, and on it he takes his seat, placing his feet in stirrups on either side. As the goat is pushed about the lodge room a series of wheels and rods, geared to the wheels on which it runs, causes the animal to buck and rear in a fearful manner, keeping the candidate in continual

DIVIDED THE MESSAGE.

The Way a Financier's Clerk Exploited a Cipher.

When Wall street first caught the fever for "industrial combinations" and began the reorganization of everything in sight one of the votaries of high finance found himself in Chicago in extreme need of communicating with his New York office.

He almost completed an arrangement for the consolidation of several western enterprises, but in order to get the final authority he needed from New York he must explain all he had done by wire to his partners.

There was no time to write. He had no cipher code. For a long time he tried to think out some way to send the information so that it would be plain to his partners and meaningless to any one else. His secret was a valuable one and once sent over the wire might be sold out to his rivals in Wall street for a large sum.

At last he decided to take the chances in plain English. Accordingly he wrote the message and gave it to his assistant to send. Half an hour later, when the assistant came back, he asked him if he had sent it.

"Not just that way," said the clerk. "I rewrote it—the first word on a Postal blank, the second on a Western Union, and so on. I sent half by each company, and neither half meant anything. Then I sent a second message by one line, saying, 'Read both messages together, alternating words.'"

The scheme was too simple for the high financier to have evolved, but it worked perfectly.

OLD TIME LONDON.

The Days When Men in the Pillory Were Pelted With Eggs.

London in 1700 was a comparatively small city of about 600,000 inhabitants, the rough and ill kept main roads to which had been but slightly improved since Tudor times. The ghastly spectacle of many of the trees on the Southward road bending under their burden of hanged men had indeed been slightly modified, but none the less the decomposing heads of "traitors" still filled the atmosphere about London bridge and Temple Bar with myriads of baneful microbes.

Our immediate forbears were evidently not overparticular about sights and smells. They were accustomed to see men sitting in the pillory pelted with rotten eggs and possibly included among their immediate circle not a few who had been deprived of their noses and ears for expressing too freely their opinions, political and religious.

The drails were in an appalling condition. The innumerable churchyards were so full of coffins that they often projected through the turf. Bear and bull baiting, dog fights and boxing matches were attended even by royalty as late as 1820, and five years later all the "dandies" in London were paying high prices to stand in the carts round Tyburn to behold twenty-two of their fellow creatures hanged for misdemeanors which in our time would be punished with a few days' imprisonment.—London Saturday Review.

THE PARSON'S CHECKS.

They Were Politely Drawn, but the Bank Threw Them Out.

According to George Cary Eggleston, Virginians of ante bellum days showed great indifference in money matters. Money in the form of coin was rarely seen. The planters were in the habit of writing checks on a slip of foolscap, instructing the bank to "please" pay the amount specified. Eggleston says: "This custom of paying by check so strongly commended itself to a certain

THE UGLY LEOPARD.

He Is a Cattle Thief and Even a Human Being Thief.

WORSE THAN LION OR TIGER.

Seizes Its Prey by the Throat and Clings With Its Claws Until It Breaks the Spine of Its Victim as Strangles It.

Less in size, but even more ferocious, the leopard has a worse character than the tiger or lion. Living mainly in trees and very nocturnal, this fierce and dangerous beast is less often seen than far rarer animals. It is widely spread over the world from the Cape of Good Hope to the Atlas mountains and from southern China to the Black sea, where it is sometimes met with in the Caucasus.

Any one who has frequented the zoo for any time must have noticed the difference in size and color between leopards from different parts of the world. On some the ground color is almost white. In others a clear nut brown. Others are jet black.

Wherever they live leopards are cattle thieves, sheep thieves, dog thieves and human being thieves. Though not formidable in appearance, they are immensely strong, and it is not unusual for them to turn man eater. Both in India and in Africa they have been known to set up in this line as deliberately as any tiger. They have four or five young at a birth. The cubs can be kept tame for some time and are amusing pets, but it is extremely dangerous to have them about.

In Hongkong an Englishman had a tame leopard. It was brought into the dining room by a coolie to be exhibited to the owner's guests. Excited by the smell of food, the leopard refused to go out when one of the women, who did not like his looks, asked that it be removed. The coolie took hold of its collar and began to haul it out. It seized him by the neck, bit it through and in a minute the coolie was dying, covered with blood, on the dining room floor.

The Chinese leopard ranges as far north as the Siberian tiger and, like the latter, seems to grow larger the farther north it is found. The color of these northern leopards is very pale, the spots are large and the fur is very long.

The natives of all countries are unanimous in declaring that the leopard is more dangerous than the lion or tiger. They have no fear of the lion, provided they are not hunting for it, for it will not attack unless provoked, but a leopard is never to be trusted.

In Africa a number of natives were firing the reeds along a stream. One of them, a boy, being thirsty and hot, stooped down to drink. He was immediately seized by a leopard. The boy's brother, with an admirable aim, buried his spear at the leopard while the boy was in his jaws. The point separated the vertebrae of the neck, and the leopard fell stone dead. But the boy could not recover. The leopard's fangs had torn open his chest and injured the lungs. The latter were exposed to view through the cavity of the ribs. He died during the night.

Leopards are essentially tree living, and nocturnal animals. Sleeping in trees or caves by day, they are seldom disturbed. They do an incredible amount of mischief among cattle, calves, sheep and dogs, being especially fond of killing and eating the latter. They seize their prey by the throat

MOVED THE TOWER.

ID. Belgian Method of Increasing the Size of a Church Building.

ning A large crowd gathered in the little village of Bocholt on the Belgian frontier to watch the unusual spectacle of a moving church tower. Some time ago it was decided that the church should be enlarged in order to accommodate the increased number of people in the village.

ome Its being impossible to enlarge the church at the choir end it was decided to lengthen the nave. It was thought that this would involve the demolition of the tower, but to this, however, the authorities were opposed, holding that the tower was of great historical value, dating many centuries back, and to this opposition was added that of the villagers, who were against the scheme on sentimental ground.

It was therefore decided to remove the tower, which is 90 feet high and about 3,000 tons in weight. This enormous mass of stone was cut away at the foundations, and a platform placed beneath it on rails. Slowly and carefully and with great patience by the workmen engaged in this extraordinary task the tower is being advanced inch by inch.

Its new place is about 15 yards in front of the old one, and it is estimated that it will take ten days or a fortnight to reach the spot which is in readiness to receive the moving mass. While the operation was in progress the bells in the steeple were ringing loudly, as though to signal the extraordinary move it was about to make.—London Standard.

HIS SYMPATHIES.

The Old Afghan Was Not Particular Who Won.

0,016 The "new-caught, sullen peoples," except when menaced by military power, see no reason to prefer one breed of white man to another. Dr. T. L. Pennell, in his book, "Among the Wild Tribes of the Afghan Frontier," tells a story to illustrate their indifference. A British officer in the Kuram valley once asked an old Afriidi where the sympathies of his people were as between England and Russia.

A TORNADO-PROOF HOUSE.

This is built in the shape of a submarine, or a dirigible balloon. From one end there is a vane or fall, which is designed to keep the house pointing in the direction of the wind, the house being mounted on a pivot at its centre, and turns freely on a circular track.

Tails are common enough on windmills and weather-vanes, but here is probably the first time that the idea has been adapted to residences. The wind-breaking end of the house, the inventor says, is reinforced and windowless, and the door opens on a flight of steps wheeled at the bottom, which follow a circular path, that tenants may always have a place upon which to descend. The inventor says his idea is particularly applicable to hospitals, and that by anchoring it can be arranged to permit of continuous sunlight.

The Gentle Game of Golf.

On one occasion an old lady was in the same railway compartment as a party of golfers. "I found fearful trouble this morning," said one. "At the first I fell right into the middle of a prickly gorse bush, and at the second I was stuck up on the top of a tree. I pitched out of bounds into the farmyard at the third, got caught by the wire at the fourth. I stuck fast in a deep hole at the fifth, found myself buried in mud at the sixth. I was lying in a heap of rough flints at the seventh, got lost at the eighth and finished up at the bottom of that dirty ditch at the last hole."

"Gracious me," cried the horrified old lady from her corner of the carriage, "and they told me that golf was an old man's game! I'll never let my Edwin play again!"—London Globe.

Acquiring a Reputation.

Archbishop Howley, who lived in the eighteenth century, most unjustly got the reputation of swearing like a trooper. The explanation is that the Duke of Cumberland, who fought the battle of Culloden and who was unspeakably profane, once went in quest of the primate to get his assistance about a certain bill which he disliked. He returned to the house of lords, saying: "It's all right, my lords. I've seen the archbishop, and he says he'll see the promoters to — before he'll vote for the — bill!" As a matter of fact, all the profanity had been supplied by the duke.—London Tatler.

Some Pay More.

The man was looking over the family bills as his wife glanced through the paper.

"Oh, John," she said, "it tells here of a young fellow who was fined $6.80 for flirting."

"That's cheaper than I got off," replied the man, his eye still on the bills.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The planters were in the habit of writing checks on a slip of foolscap, instructing the bank to "please" pay the amount specified. Eggleston says: "This custom of paying by check so strongly commended itself to a certain unworldly parson of my time that he resorted to it on one occasion in entire ignorance and innocence of the necessity of having a bank deposit as a preliminary to the drawing of checks. He went to Richmond and bought a year's supplies for his little place—it was too small to be called a plantation—and for each purchase he drew a particularly polite check.

"When the banks threw these out on the ground that their author had no account the poor old parson found the situation a difficult one to understand. He had thought that the very purpose of a bank's being was to cash checks for persons who happened to be short of money. 'Why, if I'd had the money in the bank,' he explained, 'I shouldn't have written the checks at all; I should have got the money and paid the bills.'"

"Fortunately the matter came to the knowledge of a well-to-do and generous planter who knew Parson J. and who happened to be in Richmond at the time. His indorsement made the checks good and saved the unworldly old parson a deal of trouble."—Chicago News.

DEEP SEA WATER.

Bottles With Which Samples Are Taken From Ocean Depths.

The water bottle for getting water for analysis from selected depths in the ocean is a cylinder of brass, German silver or other metal which resists the corrosion of sea water, generally about two inches in diameter and twelve or fourteen inches long, with upward opening valve at the top and bottom, connected together on a central stem. Lugs are cast on the side of the cylinder for conveniently securing it at any point along the length of the line by which it is to be lowered into the sea. During the lowering of the line the valves of the bottle are kept unsealed by the passage of the water through the cylinder during its descent, but when the motion is reversed the valves seat themselves and are locked by the descent of a small propeller in the framework above the upper valve, which rides idly on a sleeve during the lowering of the bottle, but descends along a screw thread to press the valves upon their seats when the line commences to be hauled up. A specimen of the water at the depth to which the water bottle has descended is thus brought to the surface confined within the bottle, and a series of specimens from different depths may be obtained at one haul by securing a series of water bottles at the required intervals along the sounding line.—Scientific American.

A Glorious Part.

"At last," exclaimed the low comedian, "I have a part that just suits me."

"Good," said the first old lady. "You are the only actor I ever knew who was thoroughly satisfied with his part. What is it?"

"Oh, the part isn't much, as far as that goes, but I'm supposed to be a burglar, and I break into a pantry and eat a real meal at every performance."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Heavyweight—Pardon me, did I step on your foot, sir? Coogan—If you didn't begorry, then the roof must hav fell on it—Puck.

Leopards are essentially tree living, and nocturnal animals. Sleeping in trees or caves by day, they are seldom disturbed. They do an incredible amount of mischief among cattle, calves, sheep and dogs, being especially fond of killing and eating the latter.

They seize their prey by the throat and cling with their claws until they succeed in breaking the spine or in strangling the victim. They have a habit of feeding on putrid flesh. This makes wounds inflicted by their teeth or claws liable to blood poisoning. Nothing in the way of prey comes amiss to them, from a cow in the pasture to a fowl up at roost.

In the great mountain ranges of central Asia the beautiful snow leopard is found. It is a large creature, with thick, woolly coat and a long tail like a fur boa. The color is white, clouded with beautiful gray, like that of an Angora cat. The edges of the cloudings and spots are marked with black or darker gray. The eyes are very large, bluish gray or smoke colored. It lives on the wild sheep, ibex and other mountain animals. In captivity it is far the tamest and gentlest of the large carnivora, not excepting the puma. Unlike the latter, it is a sleepy, quiet animal, like a domestic.

The West African leopard skin is more handsome than the Asiatic, the spots being very distinct and clear. He and she—they usually go in couples—are fond of hunting cantonments and around native towns, where they pick up a goat and now and then a baby.

One night I was camped in a native town and after I had retired the natives, as was their custom, were sitting about a great fire asking my caravan all sorts of questions, for the African savage is the greatest gossip in the world. Suddenly a child's cry rang out, followed by a great clamor. Rushing out to discover the cause of alarm, I was informed that a leopard had stolen from the darkness and quick as a flash had grabbed a four-year-old child and made off with it. The child was seated in the midst of the grown men and women. The latter could only lament their loss. They knew it was useless to try to pursue the beast into the dense bush.

The leopard is so bold that even in daylight he will wander about a town or a white man's premises. It is not at all unusual to get a good shot at a leopard from a bungalow veranda or a mud hut door.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

An Ingenious Defense.

Nimble wits and a glib tongue frequently save erring "coppers" on trial before the deputy commissioner at headquarters. Some of the "defenses" put up by offenders are more ingenious than convincing. Not long ago a giant patrolman, accused of being about a quarter of a mile off his beat, evolved this excuse, "You see, it was like this, your honor, I was patrolling my post when I thought I heard a man up the street yelling 'Fire! Fire!' I ran in the direction of the sound, and, would you believe me, Mr. Commissioner, there stood a fellow out on the sidewalk trying to wake up a friend of his on the second floor, and he was yelling with all his might 'Meyer! Meyer!'" "Well, that's a brand new one," said the trial commissioner, the suspicion of a smile crossing his face. "Complaint dismissed."—New York Tribune.

George—But I'm doing this night work in order to find money enough to buy you a birthday present. Wife—Well, if you will persist in working of course I can't stop it. Good night, dear.

THE LIFE-SUSTAINING BREAD

After All It Is the Bread of the Soul Which Sustains Us All.

"I have bread to eat that ye know not of."—John iv., 32.

Moments of self-realization come into all lives, when the meaning of life becomes plain and the possibilities of our own powers are visioned as in a flash.

These are the hours of ideal periods when some great work, some high mission calls us and a life within asserts itself as superior to all the needs and insufficiencies of the body and the mind.

Within the self that others know, within the self of which we are normally conscious, there dwells a greater self, a soul that seems to belong to another world, a life that bursts forth in the glory of a great hope, a noble purpose, or a consuming passion. This finer life we know is the real self, this is the life which should write its glory over all our outer seeming.

Upon the health, the strength, vigor, and vision of this inner self all living depends. Our daily doing, our words and acts, the self we show on the street is but the shell and the expression of this dynamic personality within.

Whether life shall be small or truly great, poor or truly rich depends on whether this inner life is

FED AND NOURISHED.

When we become conscious of the power, the sweep, the sublimity, the true divinity of this inner life, we assert our independence of outer conditions; we can then scorn ease and fame, bid defiance to pain and death, while these persuasions of our daily appetites and needs that most do move us at other times have now no power over us.

Even the least of men lives for some ideal. The mother could never be hired to her long toil by the lure of wages or any other temporal reward.

She cherishes a vision of the ideal child; she is sustained by hope; her heart feeds on that. She knows no working hours and the world dares not to speak of her wages, for she toils not for the material but for ideals.

This inner nourishing makes life possible for us all. Living becomes an increasing burden and nightmare when the powers within perish and the heart no longer is able to lay hold on the bread of life, when all the powers are enthralled by things and we know no world that lies too deep for words and stretches too far for material measurements.

Religion is the consciousness of these higher values in life. It is the human process of realizing the divine; it is our poor mortality finding the food of immortality; it is the power of vision by which we are able to see that which escapes the superficial eye, the enduring treasures of life, the splendid riches of love, truth, and goodness.

THE SECRET OF STRENGTH

For the business and burden of living lies not in the accumulation of vast reserves of money and possessions in things; it depends rather on the ability to discover adequate motives for living and enduring, to see encouraging meaning in life's events, to feel the inner strengthening that comes from the consciousness of duty well done and of high endeavors nobly conceived.

We all know how great souls have been sustained by their ideals; we marvel at their fortitude under trial, the joy with which they bore the stake and flame, their calm through years of imprisonment. Yet it seldom occurs to us that we need, for the constant strain of true living, their calm and strength and that the grace they had was not peculiar to them but is attainable by all.

The heavenly bread upon which they fed was simply the realization of the superiority of the ends they were serving, such as love of man, of truth, or faith, to any such considerations as comfort or pleasure. The joy of a great service gave them strength; they were sustained by the consciousness of the real worth of what they were doing.

He who takes life in divine terms, who sets first the kingdom of love and truth, who learns of the great master the joy of service and the blessedness of living for others, who takes life as just the chance to achieve some good and to help men know their God, he finds within the food of the life everlasting and he knows what that promise means, that he shall hunger and thirst no more.

ADVICE TO YOUNG PEOPLE

ANDREW CARNEGIE'S RULES FOR SUCCESS.

Says They Should Learn to Concentrate Their Mind on One Pursuit.

Every lad standing upon the threshold of manhood is possessed by an ambition. That is to say, this should be the fact with every right-minded lad. His ambition is to achieve success.

The paths are open to him. Not always paths of roses, but that matters nothing. The harder the way, the steeper the hill, the better it may be. That which is achieved without effort may not be worth achieving. That which is won by struggles with difficulties and hardships must be worthy of ambition, and when it is won will be worth the cost.

There are several rules I would lay down as necessary to success. They are based upon personal experience. Determination to succeed might, perhaps, be set down as the first rule but it must be presumed that it is the gateway through which a young man enters upon the pathway of his active life.

CONCENTRATION.

So the first rule to be stated is this. Concentrate your mind and efforts upon one pursuit. Never mind what that pursuit may be, so that it is useful and honorable, make it the centre of your thought.

I don't believe in a too broad application of that old saw, "Don't put all your eggs into one basket." There is a time when it is unwise advice.

Such a time is when you are preparing to enter upon some pursuit, a trade, a business, or a profession. Then put all your eggs into one basket; and watch the basket. Put all your thought and your energies into that one thing. More men fail to win competence and wealth from disregard of this rule than from any other cause.

Master your vocation, when you have chosen it. Don't try to be a Jack-of-all-trades. The result may be that you will be master of none.

For a second rule, be advised not to be content with simply performing the part assigned you. Do not measure your day's work by the hands of the clock, nor grade its quality by the amount of compensation you may have been promised.

The successful worker is the one who takes pride in doing his work well and who regards the few extra minutes devoted to it as well spent. If you succeed in doing more and better work than your employer expected of you, it will be as much to your own interest as to his, for if he does not perceive that you are more valuable to him than he anticipated, he will lose you eventually to some other employer who will see what there is in you.

VALUE OF WORK.

Then, for a third rule, do not be eager to make too good a bargain for yourself. A good market may be lost through over-estimating the value of goods offered.

This is true of labor, mental or physical, as it is of merchandise. Be fair in your business. Modify your estimate of your value by the estimate of those for whom you seek

CHICKEN WITH DRESSING.

Soak one-fourth box of gelatin in one-fourth cupful of cold chicken stock, then dissolve in three-fourths cupful of hot chicken stock, highly seasoned, and strain. When the mixture begins to thicken beat, using an egg beater, until frothy, then add one cup of heavy cream beaten until stiff and one cupful of cold cooked chicken, cut in dice. Season with salt and pepper. Turn into quarter pound baking powder tins, first dipped in cold water, and chill.

Dressing—Soak one and one-half teaspoonfuls of gelatin in two tablespoonfuls of cold water until soft, dissolve by standing in hot water, then strain. Beat the yolks of two eggs, and add one teaspoonful of salt, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of sugar, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper, a few grains of cayenne, one teaspoonful of mustard, one-fourth cupful of lemon juice, and one-half cupful of hot cream. Cook over hot water until mixture thickens stirring constantly, then add one and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter and the gelatin. Add mixture gradually to the whites of the two eggs beaten until stiff and when cold fold in one-half cupful of cream beaten until stiff. Mold and chill.

Turn chicken cream from molds, cut in one inch slices and arrange on lettuce leaves. Put a spoonful of salad dressing on each slice and garnish with one-half English walnut meat. Cut enough celery pieces to make three cupfuls. Break into pieces one cupful of pecan or walnut meats, and brown in a moderate oven. Mix celery and nut meats, sprinkling with one-half teaspoonful of salt, and add to one-half the salad dressing. Surround each slice of chicken cream with celery and nut mixture. This is an extremely choice and delicious recipe.

VEGETABLES.

Escalloped Cucumbers.—Pare and slice thin two large cucumbers. Put in baking dish alternate layers of cucumbers and cracker crumbs; add salt, pepper, and dots of butter to each layer. Moisten well with water. Bake three-quarters of an hour in moderately hot oven. This will serve six people.

Stuffed Tomatoes.—Use firm, ripe tomatoes. Wash and wipe them dry, cut a small hole in the blossom end and remove the inside, being careful not to break the sides. Mince finely some boiled or roasted chicken or veal, add the tomato pulp, chopped nuts, a little celery and onion, and season with salt, cayenne, lemon juice, and parsley; add sufficient bread crumbs to make a rather stiff mixture. Stuff the tomatoes with the mixture, place in well buttered pan, and bake until tender, basting with melted butter. Dish carefully and garnish with parsley.

Stuffed Beets.—One can French peas, six medium sized beets. Boil the beets and skin them; heat the peas after the juice has been turned off, and season them with salt and pepper. Cut off the stem end of each beet so that it will stand

Verse 33. Another parable—Following his custom, Matthew gives a group of three closely related parables, of which this is the second, the others being the two sons, and the marriage feast. All drive home the lesson of the fig tree, that the hollow professions of the Jewish rulers must bring upon them severe judgments. This is the only one of the three which is found in all three of the Synoptics.

A householder—Matthew alone refers to God in this way. It is a favorite word with him. The kingdom of Israel is frequently spoken of in the Old Testament as a vineyard. The hedge was a fence of any sort, and here may stand for all those "individuals, institutions, the whole national economy," by which God hedged in the life of Israel, to protect and restrain it. It is unnecessary to give a special meaning to the vinepress. In the Oriental vineyard, "Where the soil was deep, a press was dugged in the earth. This, built round with masonry and carefully cemented, received the juice expressed in a wooden structure set on the surface." The tower was a substantially built affair, commanded a view of the whole vineyard, and was apparently the abode of the keeper throughout the summer and autumn.

Husbandmen—Under the monarchy these were the kings and priests; after its collapse the scribes and priests. They are appointed to oversee the interests of the kingdom.

Went into another country—In this way Jesus indicates the cessation of the old theocratic form of government, in which Jehovah was the only King.

34. The season of the fruits drew near—Again and again God looked at seasonable times for a fair return for his investment among the Jewish people.

He sent his servants—A long line of prophets. The fruits they demanded were obedience to the law of God and the virtues of a godly life.

35. Beat . . . killed . . . stoned—Hostility to the prophets, among all classes, is written all over the history of the Jews. This antagonism changed in form and in degree, but there was no let-up, and it increased rather than decreased. According to tradition, Isaiah and Jeremiah both met violent deaths.

36. Again—After the terrible warning of the captivity Jehovah sent still other servants, but these were treated shamefully, as were the first. It is strange that the unusual benefits which these messengers of God brought to the nation should have been so lightly regarded. But until the death of Malachi, when the succession of prophets ceased, and the nation began to mourn for more of their type, each generation failed to appreciate what the Householder was doing for his vineyard by sending these servants.

37. Afterward he sent . . . his son—This was an indirect reply to the rulers, as to where Jesus obtained his authority. It was the authority of One sent from the Father, an authority greater than that of the servants by so much as the Son of God is greater than all the prophets.

They will reverence my son—Meaning that this is the treatment

This is the heir—The rulers did not acknowledge Jesus to be the true Messiah, but it was because, in their greed and obtuseness, they had misread prophecy and so looked for a King of different mold. So it is assumed in the parable that Jesus is the Son, and known to be such, and yet is deliberately killed.

39. Cast him forth—Perhaps referring to the fact that Christ was dragged forth from the city before being killed.

41. According to this, Jesus drew forth from the rulers their own confession of the righteousness of their condemnation. Mark and Luke represent Jesus as answering the question himself, while the hearers protest, "God forbid." The words are a threefold prophecy of the doom awaiting Jerusalem, the call of the Gentiles, and the continued fruitfulness of the Christian Church.

42. The stone—Suddenly changing the figure from the vineyard of Isaiah to the familiar stone which the builders rejected (Psa. 118. 22), Jesus shows that the repudiation of the stone by the builders is as unavailing as the killing of the heir by the husbandmen. In both cases the object of rejection turns up again to overwhelm the rejecters. "The husbandmen destroyed themselves when they destroyed the heir; and the builders heaped contempt upon themselves when they contemptuously set aside the stone. They lost the stone for their own edifice, but it received its due honor in a more noble building" (Plummer.)

43. This is not parable, but bald fact. The nation which despises the manifest favors of God shall suffer the humiliation of having them taken away and given to a people who will appreciate them.

44. To the stone of the Psalms is now added the stone of Isa. 8. 14 and that of Dan. 2. 34, 44. He who stumbles at the fact of Christ may be broken to pieces, but the pieces can be put together again; but, if the final condemnation of Christ the Judge fall upon a man and scatter him as dust, there can be no recovery.

45. It is characteristic of Matthew to single out the Pharisees for condemnation.

46. Took him for a prophet—The crowds had gone after him as they had after John the Baptist, because they thought at last, after such a long interval, the old order of prophets had been restored.

A NEW ONE.

On board of an ocean liner were a lady and gentleman accompanied by their young hopeful, aged six, and as is usually the case the parents were very sick while little Willie was the weldest thing on board. One day the parents were lying in their steamer chairs hoping that they'd die, and little Willie was playing about the deck. Willie did something of which his mother did not approve, so she said to her husband, "John, please speak to Willie," and the husband with the little strength left in his wasted form looked at his son and heir and feebly muttered, "How d'y'e do, Willie?"

A fancy dress parade and pageant had been held at Galashiels to raise funds for a memorial to Robert Burns in appreciation of his song, "Braw, Braw Lads o' Gala Waters."

Then, for a third rule, do not be eager to make too good a bargain for yourself. A good market may be lost through over-estimating the value of goods offered.

This is true of labor, mental or physical, as it is of merchandise. Be fair in your business. Modify your estimate of your value by the estimate of those for whom you seek to work, and then let the problem work itself out.

This will follow. Men who become great millionaires, co-operating as they must with others, must secure and hold the implicit confidence of all people with whom their business brings them into relations. They must be reputed to be fair, liberal and considerate in all things. Their word must be better than their bond, and their desire to do the fair and liberal thing better than either word or bond.

My next rule is never speculate. To gamble in stocks is not more culpable than to gamble at Monte Carlo, but it is less sensible. The chances between winning and losing are not so evenly divided.

None of the rules for success is more important than the fifth. Begin early the habit of saving a portion of your earnings, no matter how small your earnings may be. If you aim to be a millionaire, or even to have a competence upon which to retire from routine activities, the habit of saving is indispensable.

But you cannot save unless you observe the sixth and final rule of this series. It is, you must live a sober and discreet life. That does not mean that you must live a dull life by any means. Life is full of possibilities for enjoyment, and there are few of them that you need to ignore.

NO INTEMPERANCE.

Avoid intemperance, however. That is the stumbling block that has thrown many a young man from the path of success. I do not like to preach to young men, but because I have practised from my youth what I now recommend to you upon the liquor question, it is not out of place to say let liquor alone.

A young man may perhaps wisely take a glass of wine at dinner, but it is not wise to go beyond that. As to drinking between meals, it may mean the opening of the sluice that will carry you into the slough of despond.

There is a quite general impression among the medical profession, I believe that after a man is forty the occasional glass is not harmful, but beneficial. Just postpone testing the benefits of intoxicants until then.

Or, it might be a good rule for young men to resolve that they will not make this test until they become millionaires. This would probably give a majority of them, to say the least, time to think the matter over and render a final decision, shaped by not only deliberate but by quite natural judgment.

NOT WANTED.

After the new baby had arrived the doctor came into the nursery and said to small Lola, aged 4: "Lola, I know something you would like to have."

"What?" she queried. "A brother," he replied. "No, I wouldn't," rejoined Lola. "I detest men."

When Poverty comes in at the door. Love feeds and clothes him.

tender, basting with melted butter. Dish carefully and garnish with parsley.

Stuffed Beets.—One can French peas, six medium sized beets. Boil the beets and skin them; heat the peas after the juice has been turned off, and season them with salt and pepper. Cut off the stem end of each beet so that it will stand steadily and scoop a round place in the other end. Sprinkle each beet with salt and pepper and put a tiny bit of butter down in this little well and then fill it high with the peas it will hold.

BREADS.

Salt Rising Bread.—Bring to the boiling point one-half pint of new milk and one and one-half pints of water; pour this boiling hot over three tablespoons of cornmeal, add a pinch of salt, and let stand overnight in a covered vessel. In the morning stir in flour enough to make a stiff batter and beat hard; place vessel in warm water and let rise; in making up the bread put in a little lard, salt, and sugar to taste, mold into loaves, and let rise again, and bake forty-five minutes. I have tried many recipes for salt-rising bread and find this one the only sure one. This recipe makes four white loaves, soft, delicious, and healthy. J. B.

Light Buns.—Set sponge for bread at noon. Before going to bed take out about one quart of the sponge, add one egg, one-half cupful of sugar, a lump of shortening the size of an egg, and knead. In the morning mold into biscuit, let raise until light, and bake. When done touch over lightly with butter. This makes the crust tender. These buns are delicious and enjoyed by ever one.

PINEAPPLE.

Pineapple Pie.—Line a pieplate with a good crust, grate one pineapple, take one cupful of sugar, half a cupful of butter, one cupful of cream, five eggs, the whites beaten to a stiff froth; cream the butter and sugar and yolks of the eggs until light; add the pineapple, cream, and the whites of the eggs. Pour this mixture in the crust and bake in a slow oven. To be eaten when cold.

Pineapple Shortcake.—Put the pineapple to be used through a food chopper. To the juice and pulp add the juice of half a lemon and half a cupful of sugar. Let it stand for an hour or longer before using. Around individual short-cakes of rich biscuit dough, unsweetened, range circular pieces of thinly sliced oranges, taking care to remove every shred from the outside and center of the oranges. Over all pour the pineapple mixture. The flavor of the pineapple is much improved and enriched by the addition of lemon and sugar to taste.

FAVORITE DISHES.

Green Peppers.—Cut tops from six green peppers, scrape out the insides, and let stand in cold water one-half hour, then wipe dry and fill with the following mixture: One cup of cold boiled rice, one-half cup of grated cheese, one-half cup of chopped nuts, one-fourth teaspoonful salt, a dash of cayenne pepper. Bake in a moderate oven thirty minutes. Serve with boiled lamb chops, garnished with diced cold beets.

Fruit Filling.—Stir one tablespoonful of flour, one-third cup of butter, a scant cup of sugar into the beaten yolks of four eggs. Set this in a pan of hot water, heat thoroughly, but do not boil, then add one small can of grated pineapple, five cents' worth of shredded cocoanut. Put this in stove and cook until thick. Set off and let get cold before spreading on the layers of the cake. This is a most delicious filling.

CHEESE DAINTIES.

Make a pie crust of two cupfuls of flour to two heaping tablespoonfuls of lard and one-third teaspoonful of salt and water. Roll half of pie crust. Sprinkle with flour, spread scantily with soft butter. Place little dots of cheese no larger than a half pea about an inch apart all over crust. Take a pinch of salt between thumb and finger, and sprinkle a little on each cheese dot. Roll the rest of the pie crust. Place it over the prepared crust, pressing slightly. Cut in two inch squares, prick with a fork and bake.

Cheese Meat.—Make a batter quite thick of one pint of flour, one and one-half teaspoonful of baking powder, salt and pepper, and milk. Cut cheese one-fourth inch thick in inch squares. Dip the cheese in the batter, covering thickly. Have ready hot butter and lard, half and half. With a tablespoon drop the dipped cheese squares in the hot fat, leaving room to spread. Fry quickly, turning to brown each side.

BANANAS.

Banana Salad.—Pare the bananas, cut into halves, and dip each half into a rich mayonnaise dressing. While the fruit is still moist with the dressing lay it into a dish of finely chopped nut meat and lay each banana on a clean lettuce leaf, adding a border of nut meats or salted almonds.

Baked Bananas.—Peel six bananas and place in an agate baking pan. Mix one-third of a cupful of sugar with two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Pour this over the bananas and bake twenty minutes in a slow oven, take out, turn out into a dish and set away to cool. Serve with whipped cream.

"MOTHER'S WAYS"

Martha was frying doughnuts. She bent her slender form back to escape the sizzling, sputtering heat, while with her long fork she rescued the crisp brown circles from the bubbling fat, and deposited them in a large yellow dish. Dan, up from the field, stopped a moment to look at the picture before he said:

"Well, Matty, doughnuts? That's good."

"It's a scorcher out," he continued, perching on the white-scoured table and helping himself liberally from the heaping pan. "These are right nice, Matty. Most as good as mother's. You'll catch up if you keep on trying."

A deeper flush than that born of the cook-stove and the hot day mounted to Martha's cheeks. Then a little quivering sound held her at tomorrow. That was a bit soggy to-night."

The smile that played about Martha's lips spoke more of amusement than annoyance. Then she said:

"Don't say anything about it to her, Dan. Please!"

"Why, of course not, Matty, if you don't want me to. But you'll never learn if you're proud."

"I wonder what he'd say if he knew that she made that corn-cake?" thought Martha, when Dan had joined his mother on the porch. "I'd rather he'd find fault with me than to tell him. She wasn't used to the oven; it wasn't a fair sample."

"You've got as nice a little wife as ever was," said Mrs. Wilde, as her son sat down beside her.

"That's so!" responded Dan, heartily. "You'll be a lot of company for her, and you can teach her your ways."

"Hasn't she got ways of her own?" returned his mother.

The next day Martha fell sick. "A bit run down," said the doctor. "Put her to bed for three or four days, and keep that staver out of her way," pointing to Master Baby.

"It's a real stroke of luck that mother's here," said Dan. "You can just take it easy and get well. Mother'll look after me."

"He won't miss me a mite," thought Martha, and she choked. Then the choke turned into a smile as she remembered the corn-cake.

"Does Matty set her bread over-night?" inquired Mrs. Wilde that night of her son. But Dan's masculine memory was not equal to the occasion.

"You do just as you always do, mother, and we shall get along all right. It will be a good chance to get things into shipshape order."

"Order!" exclaimed Mrs. Wilde. "There isn't a house in better order far nor near!"

"I guess there ain't much lacking," responded Dan. "But she does lots of things different from what you brought me up to."

"You tell her that?"

"Why yes, but she's a bit touchy about it sometimes."

"Dan Wilde! You are a gump if you are my son!"

This was all the comment she made aloud, but when he left the room she continued the conversation with herself:

"So that's the way the wind blows! Dan's a regular old maid. I guess I didn't spank him enough when he was little, but he was always so good. My ways, indeed! Poor Matty! I guess that is my chance to work for weal or woe. Many a household's broken up for less than a mother-in-law."

Martha stayed in bed a week, growing rested and strong under tender ministrations.

"You make Dan so comfortable he won't miss me," she said, wistfully, one day.

"Don't you fret, Matty. Dan's awful fond of you. You ought to hear him talk about you."

A few days later Mrs. Wilde drove off in the afternoon stage. As the vehicle creaked its asthmatic way along the dusty road, the good woman's face took on a half-amused half-pathetic expression.

"I don't know as I've done any good," she mused. "I know I haven't done harm, and that's saying something, for it lay to my hand if I'd been so inclined. I must own I was scared about the baby's sleeping outdoors. A draft's a draft the world over. But he's a stout little things get burned on purpose. It goes against the grain to do discredit to your own cooking, with your eyes open, but I guess it paid."

"It seems real good to see baby fixed up once more," remarked Dan, as he sat down to the supper-table that night. "Mother said she didn't have time to wash and iron his white frocks. She said you must be real smart to keep him so fresh. I told her I guessed you were."

"Seems like old times," he added. "Mother didn't use the good dishes."

The next morning Dan added the last drop of content to Martha's cup.

"I declare," he said, "I don't know when I've had such an appetite! Seems as if mother'd fallen off a bit in her cooking. Things didn't taste as they used. I've always thought her ways were all right."

But neither Dan nor Martha suspected that "mother's ways" included the broad and beneficent principle of giving up her own way. —Mary E. Mitchell, in Youth's Companion.

HUMORS OF SCOTCH LAWYERS

The Late Lord Young Was Very Fond of a Joke.

A case was being tried before the late Lord Young—"Crabbe v. Crabbe."

"I may explain, my lud," said the advocate, "that my client Crabbe is a nephew of our opponent Crabbe, but a few years ago he dropped the 'i' in his name for the sake of euphony."

"Ah," replied Lord Young, "he has Biblical authority for that—'If thy 'i' offend thee, pluck it out.'"

The present Lord Justice General (Lord Dunedin), was, as Mr. Graham Murray, pleading before Lord Young. At the time Mr. Graham Murray had the largest practice at the Scottish Bar, but was also able to mix freely and late in Edinburgh society. In the course of an argument Mr. Murray, to find a metaphor, made some reference to a ball he had been at the previous night, or, rather, the same morning.

"I cannot understand, Solicitor-General," said Lord Young, "how you can burn the candle at both ends."

"Ah," replied Mr. Graham Murray, "I do that to make both ends meet."

Lord Ardwall, one of the Judges of the Court of Session, is a man of large proportions. One day, as Mr. Andrew Jamieson he was pleading before Lord Young, and the opposing counsel interposed with the remark that he was not disposed to disagree with his friend.

"But, my lud," said Mr. Jamieson, "the Lord Advocate and I are not by any means in the same boat."

"No," said Lord Young, "you will require one entirely to yourself."

The late Mr. Lancaster had against him as a witness an Irish woman who was particularly categorical as to her dates, and how "this happened at 4.27 on Tuesday, this at 6.33 on Friday," and so on. At last the patience of the advocate was exhausted.

"My dear woman," said Mr.

ISLAMIAN IN AFRICA

WHOLE TRIBES HAVE BEEN LOST TO CHRISTIANITY.

Native Loses His Respect for Whites and Becomes Imbued With Mistrust.

"After 1,900 years of Christianity," said the Archbishop of Canterbury in a sermon the other day, "we look out on a world very largely non-Christian still."

In the same week that the Primate delivered this sermon a Berlin correspondent wrote: "The circumstance that Mohammedanism is gaining more proselytes than is Christianity among the natives in the African colonies has been frequently referred to of late both in the newspapers and the Reichstag." Particulars are given of German Christian activity, but the Berlin Missionary Society admits in its report for 1909 that unless are made by the Christian missions to counteract its influence the native population of German East Africa will undoubtedly become Mohammedan within the next few decades.

SERIOUS EFFORTS

The Government, says the report, may be right in declining to interfere with the religious belief of the natives, "but the fact remains that when once the negro has been won over to Islam he loses his natural respect for and the native tractability of his race to the whites and becomes imbued with mistrust, not only toward the Christian missions, but also toward the white race and European dominion."

A similar state of things elsewhere is referred to in the new quarterly review, Der Islam. In one of the articles Dr. Enno Littmann, professor of Semitic languages at Strausberg University, draws attention to the spread of Islamism in Northern Abyssinia during

THE LAST CENTURY.

Whole tribes, he says, which were once Christian and still bear Christian names have become Mohammedan. He mentions in particular the two Mensa tribes, which travelers reported fifty years ago to be Christian. When he was in the country in the year 1905 he received the following account of them:

"Their religion was formerly Christian and each branch had its churches and priests. Later on, however, their priests did not know how to read; then the Moslems came among them and converted them to Islamism. Very few at the present day are still Christians."

"Mamma, the angels have to work awfully hard, don't they?" queried little Viola. "I don't know dear," replied her mother. "Why do you think they do?" "Well," answered Viola, "if they have to light up the stars every night and blow them out every morning, I guess it must keep 'em pretty busy."

court, and something had to be done to save the young counsel from his unheard-of rashness. The matter was submitted to the Dean of the Faculty of Advocates, who, when the Court assembled next day, rose and addressed their lord-

“It’s a scorching out,” he continued, perching on the white-scoured table and helping himself liberally from the heaping pan. “These are right nice, Matty. Most as good as mother’s. You’ll catch up if you keep on trying.”

A deeper flush than that born of the cook-stove and the hot day mounted to Martha’s cheeks. Then a little gurgling sound held her attention, and the color died away. It was a soft little sound at first, but it grew in volume until, losing all dove notes, it burst into an undeniable roar. Martha hurried out, returning with her small son held in her proud arms, the baby tears already changed into smiles.

Dan bolted the last crumb and held out his arms. “Come here, buster! Hello! Going to punch your daddy?”

“Isn’t he a darling? Did mamma’s baby have a nice nap on the cool porch?”

“You didn’t let him sleep outdoors?” said Dan.

“It’s the best place for him this weather.”

“There’s sure to be drafts. Mother never let us breathe outdoor air when we were asleep.”

It was on the tip of Martha’s tongue to say, “That’s why you take cold so easily,” but she held her peace. She stood at the window, hugging baby, as her husband walked down the pasture slope. Then she went to her room, put baby on the bed, and gave him a darning-egg to play with.

“I suppose she’d face him north and give him a rubber ring,” she thought. “O baby, dear, I wish I could do something right.”

“Soda biscuit,” said Dan, the next morning, as he sat down to the breakfast-table. “Mother’s recipe!”

“Yes.”

“That’s right. She made the best I ever ate. I’m going over to Houlton to-day, Matty. You won’t be lonesome if I leave you alone, shall you?”

“Not with baby.”

“He’s only left two, if they weren’t like his mother’s,” she said to herself, as she cleared off the table. “I wish I didn’t mind. Good old Dan!”

Suddenly an idea struck her.

“I’ll give him a treat, though he’ll be worse than ever. It’s only a four-mile drive. Baby wants to take a ride with mamma!”

Nothing would have hurt Mother Wilde’s warm heart more than to know that she, with her two hundred pounds of flesh and her brimming store of kindly intentions, was the skeleton in the closet of her daughter-in-law’s domestic happiness. She had seen little of her son’s wife. The wooing and winning had taken place in a distant town, and there they had boarded until Dan had bought a small farm a few miles from his old home. It chanced, from one cause and another, that Mrs. Wilde had not yet been in the new house.

“Mother!” cried Dan that night, springing up the steps in surprise. “Well, this is all right!”

“Matty wouldn’t take no for an answer. She drove over in all the heat. Why, hain’t the baby grown? He’s the moral of you, son, only he’s got his mother’s eyes.”

“He couldn’t have prettier ones,” asserted Dan.

After supper Dan lingered in the kitchen: “I’m glad you brought mother over,” he said to Martha. “You can learn a lot of things. Just ask her about corn-cake to-

AN ENTIRE BARN BUILT OF CONCRETE

T comes as a surprise that any one should ask where the “rat” came from.

To most of us the rat has been familiar from our boyhood. The destructive little brute caused us no small excitement in our early days on the farm. He was always nosing around among the oat or the wheat bins, and eating holes in the bags of grain. In fact, nothing was sacred to him.

We early learned that he was an exceedingly intelligent animal. After we had caught a certain number of his family in the trap, we could catch no more, although from the damage caused by his tribe we well knew that he was just about as numerous as before those erring sons of his wandered into our trap after the enticing piece of cheese.

That he was a valorous animal and a great fighter, was demonstrated every time we emptied the trap in front of the dog. Towser made a jump for him, but unless the old dog was pretty smart the rat would send him yelping down the field. Also when we cornered a few of the rat family in a bin and went after them with the pitchfork, we, ourselves, sometimes were made to beat a hasty retreat.

If the rat were as big in stature as we are, it is doubtful if we would have the snap we have controlling the animal kingdom. Mr. Rat would dispute the possession of our own homes with us. Small as he is, he disputes it with us now. We have been trying to squelch him for many years past, and he has been defeating us at every turn. He is more numerous than ever before, and is doing more damage than we ever supposed.

A recent estimate of the damage he does in Canada each year was placed at a fabulous amount. It was more millions per year than most farmers have dollars in their pockets when they go to market.

It has now come to this, that the scientists all over the world are discussing means to get rid of the rat. In Paris a campaign has begun, but has not met with much success. In London something of the same nature is going on.

The rat is said to have come over in a ship from China. All we can say is that we heartily wish he had taken the next ship back. Unfortunately, he obtained a foothold in England, and multiplied at such a rate that he is now found all over the world. It is a strange explanation of the coming of the rat, but that is how we are told he came to be here.

Fortunately for the farmer, the rat seems to be originally a town animal. Apparently he is not a suburbanite, save by education. He prefers to inhabit underground passages and sewers and pick up a living wherever he can find it. Yet he is now spreading out into the country more and more, and unless the farmers do something to combat his advance he will be a serious menace to their prosperity, before many years have passed.

Around farm buildings is constantly to be had a surplus supply of food. The rat can find more to eat in a well-stocked barn than he could possibly know what to do with. There are eggs to be broken open and sucked, and young chickens to be eaten. There are loads of flour bags, and, in fact, the farmer leaves no stone unturned to make things really comfortable and enticing for the town-starved the fields, and it is complained that he is now numerous enough to be a serious menace to the crops. But if the farmers will employ concrete in the construction of their buildings they ought to be able to make it exceedingly difficult for the rat to take shelter in their barns. Keep the rat out of the barn and he will try to get into the house. Keep him out of the house and he will be decimated by starvation during the winter, when there is nothing for him to eat outside.

Ridding the Farm of Rats

Fortunately, a liberal use of concrete in the construction of buildings will not cost the farmer anything. In fact, after he has found out the advantages of using concrete, he will feel rather grateful than otherwise to the rat for having been the cause of his education in the matter. When it is remembered that barn floors or feeding floors constructed of concrete will never wear out, that they will keep out mud and dirt, that they may be washed down and kept clean, that by a proper juncture between floors and walls, all apertures through which rats may enter may be done away with, one begins to appreciate some of the advantages of the use of concrete.

One has only to let his mind rest a short time on the subject and use a little ingenuity to be convinced that there is absolutely no excuse any longer for many of the disadvantages attending life on the farm, now that a material which is cheap and which may be moulded into almost any rat. The rat appreciates this, and takes up his quarters on the farms, bringing with him, very often, the germs of disease from his dirty city haunts.

The question is, What is the farmer going to do to combat the advance of the rat? What is mankind, as a whole, going to do about it? It is a serious question, and we know of but one answer. It is this: Make buildings that he cannot enter. Construct buildings of concrete, a material which will not rot and through which it is absolutely impossible for the rat to eat his way.

In a cold country like Canada, it ought to be possible to starve the rat to death during the winter. Certainly it is possible to starve him on the farm. In summer he may forage in form, by any reasonably intelligent person, is available. In this one matter of defence against rats, there is not a progressive farmer in the country who could not surround with an indestructible covering his granaries and root houses and other places where he stores his flour or other articles of which rats are so fond, and of which they make such havoc. Just figure up what that would mean, not only in the matter of appearance, but in an actual saving of money, and see if you do not think it is worth trying. Don't go in too heavily at first. Make a test case on some of your grain bins, or on some of the smaller places where grain or flour is stored. Don't make it an expensive operation. No doubt you will go further as soon as you have found out the advantages.

On Monday of last week Wesley T. Jewell passed away at the residence of his brother, Mr. W. J. Jewell, Dundas street. Deceased whose home was in Adolphustown, was working with his brother and about May 24th contracted Typhoid fever and other complications setting in he gradually grew weaker until the end came. Deceased was well known in town and deep sympathy is felt for his widowed mother, his sister and brother. The funeral took place on Wednesday of last week from Mr. W. J. Jewell's residence and the remains placed in Riverview cemetery vault and later removed to the family plot at Adolphustown.

Judging from present indications there seems to be an increased demand from people of other sections for good farms in and near Napanee. Never before has there been such demand for choice farm property in this section, which speaks well for Napanee. W. G. H. Brown, a local Real Estate agent, reports that while the sale of town property is not very brisk at present there is a great demand for good farms near town, and expects a great many changes in farm property this fall. Among the newcomers to this section are Robert Kirkpatrick of Tamworth who recently purchased Irvin Glass' farm from Mr. Brown, and William McKeown of Croydon, who purchased Syrus Miller's farm on Little Creek. Among Mr. Brown's recent sales of town property are Mrs. Miles Hawley's, John street residence, to Mr. Reid, John Ellison's property on Dundas street to Charles Stevens, and John Wallace's dwelling near the park to Dennis Lake.

Very Thorough.

New York's collector of customs was talking about smuggling.

"Smuggling must cease," he said. "We'll make it cease, if we have to be as strict and thorough as the French customs officer. This strict officer, standing on the pier, frowned on a tourist with a swollen cheek.

"What have you got there?" he said, pointing to the swelling.

"An abscess, sir," was the reply. "Well," said the officer impatiently, "open it, please."—Washington Star.

It Had an Effect.

"Did that sarcastic letter you wrote to the milkman requesting him to let you attend to the job of watering the milk now that you have a new filter in the kitchen faucet have any effect?"

QUEER NATURAL HISTORY.

Some Curious Eighteenth Century Descriptions of Animals.

Some curious specimens of folklore and natural history are contained in a rare book called "The Sportsman's Dictionary," which was published toward the end of the eighteenth century. The author was evidently a Philistine among Philistines in his attitude toward nature.

Of the master musician, the blackbird, he says:

"This bird is known by all persons and is better to be eaten than kept, being much sweeter to the palate when dead and well roasted than to the ear while living; sings about three months in the year, or four at most, though his song is worth nothing, but if he be taught to whistle he is of some value, being very loud, though coarse."

And here is a story of the squirrel with the ring in it of the seventeenth century, more than the eighteenth century. It reminds one of the hares of Izaak Walton, that changed their sexes once a year:

"If what is reported of them be true the admirable cunning of the squirrel appears in her (where we commonly use 'his' when the sex need not be specified our ancestors often used 'her') swimming or passing over a river, for when she is constrained by hunger so to do she seeks out some kind or small bark of a tree, which she sets upon the water and then goes into it, and, holding up her tail like a sail, lets the wind drive her to the other side and carries meat in her mouth to prevent being famished by the length of the voyage."

Of the wild boar we have this: "And what place soever he bites, whether man or dog, the heat of his teeth causes inflammation in the wound. If therefore he does but touch the hair of a dog he burns off—nay, huntsmen have tried the heat of his teeth by laying hairs on them as soon as he was dead, and they have shriveled up as if touched with a hot iron."
